

Frame 4: Sew it back up, add your 3rd place ribbon and you'll have a lovely sachet to hang anywhere you want a bit of freshness. "It's a good thing."

If Martha Stewart would prefer not to see the cartoon published in POULTRY PRESS, Bill Wulff will not print it. If, on the other hand, Martha Stewart regards the cartoon as harmless and amusing, Bill Wulff will publish it in the next issue of POULTRY PRESS.

In either case, if you can let me know your answer by the end of the business day on Wednesday, May 14th, I would appreciate it.

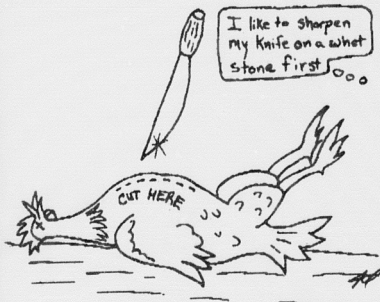

The overwhelmingly positive and enthusiastic response to the Martha Stewart visit to Bloomsburg has been wonderful for the exhibition poultry hobby, and the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club is very pleased to have hosted the visit.

Martha Stewart...

after her bird didn't win the "Most beautiful bird in the Show Award"!

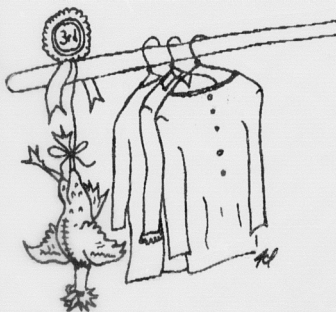

I like to sharpen my knife on a whet stone first.

I then pick a lovely floral polka-dot (which I made myself) and fill the cavity.

Dear Bill,

The general consensus of opinion, both among the CPAC officers and Martha Stewart's office, is that, even though the cartoon is amusing, it would be best for the exhibition poultry hobby if you would NOT publish it.

Martha Stewart's visit to the Bloomsburg show was wonderful publicity for our hobby. She did a lot for us—and continues to promote the hobby everywhere she goes—and it seems both unfair and unnecessary for us a hobby group to get a laugh at her expense.

I, personally, and Martha Stewart's office, very much appreciate your thoughtfulness in showing us this cartoon and asking for our opinion as you did.

Sincerely,

Robert

Here is a copy of the article that I wrote about the Bloomsburg show. It will be published in the June issue of POULTRY PRESS (a national publication with a circulation of about 5,000). In the same issue there will be an article by the editor of the paper on the show; also lots of photographs taken at the show. The editor (Bill Wulff) told me that he will make sure that Martha Stewart gets a copy.

I mailed a letter to Martha Stewart today and enclosed copies of three articles from Pennsylvania newspapers about her visit to the Bloomsburg show. Martha Stewart's visit was the page-one, top-of-the-page story in two Sunday newspapers on 05-04-1997; the circulation of both papers is reasonably large.

Yesterday I received an e-mail message about Martha Stewart's visit here from a "Susan" that must be you, although I can't remember ever giving you my e-mail address (silasrobert@juno.com). Did you send me an e-mail yesterday?

Sincerely,

Robert

CENTRAL PENNSYLVANIA AVIAN
CLUB'S 1997 SPRING
SHOW AND AUCTION

By S. Robert Powell

On the first weekend in May at the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds, excitement was in the air. It was an almost tangible excitement, and it was apparent from the opening of the poultry building at 7 A.M. on Saturday, May 3rd, until long after coop-out time on Sunday morning, May 4th.

First-Class Show

What could cause all this excitement? Perhaps the most obvious cause was that a first-class poultry show, sponsored by the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club, was in progress. The show was housed both in the poultry building and the dog-show building next door, which were filled to capacity with over 1,500 birds shown by 150 exhibitors for the CPAC's 21st annual spring show.

The 1997 semiannual meet of the American Bantam Association took place in conjunction with the show. A special feature of that meet was the qualifying meet for Mottled Old English Game bantams. The meet, judged by Ralph Sheriff, Jr.—the vice president of the American Bantam Association—was successful, and Mottled Old English Game bantams are now an officially recognized variety by the American Bantam Association.

Excellent Show Buildings

All of the standard and bantam chickens were displayed in the main poultry building. Also in this main show hall were (1) the American Bantam Association's information table, manned by ABA President Larry Peterson and Secretary Eleanor Vinhage, and (2) the Poultry Press table, manned by Bill, Joyce, and David Wulff.

Next door to the show hall was the second show building. The club had never used this building before, but it turned out to be an excellent facility in which to show birds, especially waterfowl and turkeys. The standard ducks, turkeys, and geese were displayed in the ample, sturdy, and viewer-friendly cages on the right side of the building. The bantam waterfowl and the junior show were housed on the main floor. The remainder of the space in the building was used by vendors, breed and specialty clubs, and poultry organizations.

In keeping with the special nature of the show, the cages were all skirted. In addition, the show hall was embellished with a wide array of annual flowers in bloom. These flowers were distributed throughout the building on the tops of the show cages. Jerry Scott's cut-flower arrangement in the form of a chicken was displayed on top of Champions' Row. This floral arrangement was admired by many people and was presented to Jane Edington at the conclusion of the show.

Show Secretary Briget Kane, assisted by Adrienne Blankenship, arranged a very attractive award table on which were displayed the etched glass plates to be awarded to the class and show champions, the custom rosettes, as well as the Best of Breed and Reserve of Breed buttons for both the open and junior shows.

Also displayed on the award table were special show awards created by club members. Don Emery's commemorative wooden plaques were present and so was Dick Laabs' figure of a Japanese bantam female. The figure was molded in solid pewter and was awarded to the Best Japanese Bantam Female in the show.

Special thanks to Paul Slusser and Fred Trump of the Bloomsburg Fair's board of directors for making available these excellent facilities for the CPAC spring show and auction.

Martha Stewart

An additional cause of excitement was the presence of Martha Stewart and a five-person television crew in the show halls and on the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds all day on Saturday. Martha Stewart, guru of fine living, author, and nationally known television personality, has raised poultry for many years. She visited the show at the invitation of the club for the purpose of selecting "the most beautiful bird in the show."

Footage her film crew shot of the poultry show and auction will be broadcast on the Martha Stewart television program this fall.

Accompanied by ABA judge Johnny Batson, Martha Stewart examined all of the birds in the show and selected a White Crested Blue Polish bantam hen as "the most beautiful bird in the show." This Polish hen was exhibited by Joel and Ellen Henning of Colden, NY, who were awarded a rosette by Martha Stewart for their win.

The first runner-up in the most beautiful bird contest was a standard White Rock hen shown by Shelby and Eddie Harrington of Twin Cedar Farm, Houston, DE.

S. Robert Powell served as host for the Martha Stewart visit. Special thanks to Virginia Sosik, who served as hostess and assisted Robert Powell with all of the arrangements for this day-long, high-profile visit by one of America's most discerning fanciers of things natural and beautiful.

This special appearance by Martha Stewart at the show was clearly the magical ingredient that transformed what is invariably an interesting and exciting annual event into an unforgettable experience for all concerned.

Friendly Show

There was also much excitement in the air because of the exuberant interaction among the CPAC members, the exhibitors, and the hundreds of visitors to the show halls.

The Bloomsburg show has a reputation of being a very friendly show, which is perhaps why people always come back to Bloomsburg.

Poultry shows are about birds, but they are also about people, and the Bloomsburg club does not overlook the needs and comforts of the exhibitors and visitors to the show. At Bloomsburg, there are always many places to sit down and rest, or visit with friends.

Many Activities

So many different activities together helped to keep the excitement level high throughout the two days of the show: meets by the APA and the ABA and a long list of breed and specialty clubs; an ABA qualifying meet for Mottled Old English Game bantams; a junior show; a junior showmanship class; a live-bird auction; a wide variety of vendors displaying poultry supplies for sale; a Chinese auction; a 50/50 drawing; a food stand featuring a wide assortment of homemade goods; a banquet; and last—although certainly not least—the competition for “the most beautiful bird in the show” as judged by Martha Stewart.

The CPAC's live-bird and poultry supplies auction is arguably the best auction on the East coast for exhibition poultry. The Reverend Roland Romig has served the CPAC as auctioneer for many years, and his knowledge of poultry, together with his skills as an auctioneer, make the auction a pleasure for all concerned.

Held in the Arena on Saturday, a very successful live-bird auction was conducted in a new auction format for the CPAC.

The birds were displayed in a series of cages only before they were sold. After the birds were sold, they were returned to their boxes, which were provided by the consignors. The boxes were then picked up by the individual buyers.

Special thanks to the Reverend Roland Romig and his capable assistants for conducting this very successful auction.

Food

Food for exhibitors and visitors at a poultry show is important. The in-house food stand this year was under the capable direction of Molly and Andy Casazza.

In addition, a first-class banquet was held on Saturday night on the fairgrounds in the Arts and Crafts building. The banquet, attended by more than 115 people, was catered by Jilly's Restaurant (Irene and Jill Shaw) of Sweet Valley, PA. The primary menu items were Chicken Francais, Virginia Ham, and the stuffed shells. A special feature of the banquet was the beautiful and delicious cake that was embellished with the logo of the American Bantam Association.

SPPA Booth

Another special feature of the show this year was the display that was set up by the Society for the Preservation of Poultry

Antiquities. SPPA president Craig Russell manned the booth. On display was an original painting of Red Dorkings by C. Richard Getz, son of the noted poultry artist Roy Getz. The SPPA will have one thousand signed and numbered prints made of this painting and will sell them for the benefit of the SPPA.

The C. Richard Getz painting of Red Dorkings was officially unveiled at the show by Martha Stewart.

Thank You

The success of this show was, in a large measure, the result of the dedicated, enthusiastic, and tireless work of Show Secretary Briget Kane, President Mark Whitebread, and Treasurer Mark Burns, all of whom put in hundreds of hours of work before, during, and after the show to guarantee success. Sincere and heartfelt thanks to them all from all CPAC members and exhibitors for an outstanding job, well done!

Special thanks to the officers and directors of the Sussex County (NJ) Poultry Association for lending the CPAC the additional cages to house the many birds shown at this important event.

Special thanks also (1) to Arlene Sliker and Kim Weaver for conducting the Chinese Auction, (2) to Benton Roller Mills for donating the feed and shavings needed for the show, and (3) to Jerry Scott for inscribing in his fine calligraphic hand the CPAC cash prize and specials envelopes for the show. Over $1,000 in cash show prizes and specials were awarded.

Reviews

A great many exhibitors and visitors to the show and auction sponsored by the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club reported that this was the best poultry weekend they had ever experienced. The word "wonderful" was used by many people to describe the event.

Follow-up press coverage of the show was excellent. The show and auction were page-one, top-of-the-page stories in both the Bloomsburg Press Enterprise and the Harrisburg Patriot-News.

In addition, the show and auction were mentioned on The Tonight Show on May 9, 1997. Martha Stewart was one of Jay Leno's guests and, having had experience in evaluating her own poultry--as well as judging poultry under the direction of Johnny Batson at the Bloomsburg show--Martha Stewart evaluated a live bird that was brought on stage. During the discussion with Jay Leno on nationally broadcast television, Martha Stewart remarked that she had "had the best time last Saturday. . .[at] the Central Pennsylvania Avian Show."

Martha Stewart's visit to the 1997 Bloomsburg show was truly "a good thing" for the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club and for the exhibition poultry hobby in general.

Fall Show and Auction

The CPAC will sponsor a 1997 fall show and auction the third weekend of October. Briget Kane (304-788-5555) will serve as secretary of the poultry show. The judges for the poultry show have not yet been selected. David Stiles (717-465-3207) will serve as the secretary of the pigeon show. The judges of the pigeon show will be Terry Fick and Muard Naugle.

Celebrity adds spice to midstate chicken show

BY JEFF MCGAW
OF THE PATRIOT-NEWS

The idea was hatched as officers of the Avian Club of Pennsylvania met in November to brainstorm ideas for their spring poultry show: Invite Martha Stewart.

Stewart's fondness for raising exotic chickens is well-known, someone suggested. It would add something new and different to the 21st annual show in Bloomsburg, they said.

Eyes rolled, as if someone had suggested the single-comb leghorn replace the bald eagle as the national bird. Stewart, the multimedia magnate who built her fortune by preaching the joys of composting and eating farm fresh eggs, would have bigger plans, they said.

See STEWART / Back Page

STEWART/Celebrity picks prettiest exhibition chicken during Bloomsburg show

Robert Powell, spokesman for the club dedicated to raising exhibition chickens, forged ahead.

He wrote a sugary-sweet invitation to Stewart, saying she would be "the magical ingredient to the show's success." To the group's delight, she agreed.

Yesterday, amid the clucking of thousands of exotic chickens and dozens upon dozens of Martha fans, she descended on the Bloomsburg Fair. Grounds to sign autographs, shake hands, hug babies and, most of all, to judge chickens.

Few were let down.

"It's a good promotion for the poultry hobby," Powell said. The exhibition chicken subculture is often ignored by the general population, he said. "There are very few people who would endorse poultry shows. To have somebody as high profile as she is saying raising chickens is OK is really wonderful."

Powell said Stewart received no money for appearing. "It's a business trip for her," he said.

Her entourage included a camera crew shooting scenes for an episode of Stewart's television.

"I shook her hand when she came in," said Carl L. Harris, 67, a former president of the Pennsylvania Avian Club. "I asked her one question: 'How in the heck do you get all that work done? The things you do? How do you find time in the day to do all the 'things that you do?'"

"She says 'I get up at 4 o'clock in the morning. . . . She's a very talented woman. Very talented. She can build a barn, she can raise chickens, and she can come in the house and cook. . . . she's a good woman.'"

As Stewart made her way down a long aisle lined with colorful, caged chickens, Iris Hasselhoff and Dick Cornell of Lewisburg waited nearby for an opportunity for an autograph and possibly a picture.

Hasselhoff was one of dozens carrying copies of her magazine, Martha Stewart Living.

"I think she's got wonderful ideas," Hasselhoff said. "She's very creative. . . . a very natural kind of person. She's very friendly. . . . very good taste. She knows how to live well."

Cornell offered this perspective on Martha madness: "Martha Stewart is to women what Indiana Jones is to men."

Eddie Harrington of Harrington, Del., said his wife is a faithful viewer of Stewart's television program, but added "we just come here to talk chickens."

Stewart's role in the show was to select the prettiest chicken.

Paying homage to her polish roots, Stewart chose a small, white crested blue polish chicken, owned by Joel and Ellen Henning of Colden, N.Y.

May 16, 1997

Dear Martha,

The follow-up publicity and press coverage on your visit to Bloomsburg has been wonderful. Your visit to the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club's 1997 spring show was the page-one, top-of-the-page story on Sunday, May 4th, in both the Bloomsburg Press Enterprise and the Harrisburg Patriot-News. The photographs in both articles are excellent. Copies of both articles are enclosed. Also enclosed is a copy of an article from the Patriot-News of May 1st announcing your visit.

It was great to hear you speak of your visit to Bloomsburg during your appearance on The Tonight Show on May 9th. You should be awarded a medal of some kind for remaining calm, cool, and collected in the midst of such nonsense as the egg throwing and the sloppy painting that the others did during the segment.

During the trip from Bloomsburg back to the Wilkes-Barre/Scranton airport, you mentioned that your next towels would have pictures of poultry on them and that the towels would be sold to benefit the American Bantam Association. What a wonderful idea—and very generous on your part! Allow me, if I may, to offer a couple of observations on the idea.

First, it might be a good idea to have the sale of the poultry towels for the benefit of both the American Bantam Association and the American Poultry Association. They are the two primary governing organizations for the exhibition poultry hobby in America. There is a certain amount of overlapping in their coverage, as it were. The ABA focuses only on bantams; the APA (which is the oldest livestock organization in America) focuses on both bantams and standards. Both organizations get along well. In fact, they will hold a "joint" national meet in Columbus, OH in the fall of next year. (I'm sure that they're going to ask you to attend. Perhaps they already have done so?)

If you were to have the sale of the poultry towels benefit both the ABA and the APA, a very auspicious time to make that announcement would be at Columbus next fall (assuming, of course, that they invite you and that you are able to accept). In any event, I have not mentioned—and will not mention—to anyone the sale of the poultry towels for the benefit of the ABA (and the APA?).

Second, the American Poultry Association has a large collection of copyrighted paintings of poultry--some of which would certainly be very good for use on the towels--which is surely another reason for including the APA under the umbrella, so to speak. The APA is very fussy (understandably so) about allowing anyone to use any of their copyrighted visual material, but if a proposed use (e.g., the towels) were to benefit the APA, they would surely be open to any discussion of the use of their visual material. The ABA does not, I'm fairly certain, have a significant photo archive.

If the poultry towel announcement, for one reason or another, is not or can not be made at Columbus, I can think of several other appropriate poultry forums at which you might make such an announcement.

In any event, if you need the names and addresses of the current officers and boards of directors of the APA and the ABA—or any other information about these national poultry organizations—I shall be pleased to send that information to you.

One additional follow-up note on your day at Bloomsburg: The name of the judge with whom you worked is Johnny Batson (not Bapson, as given on the proposed outline of filming that was drawn up for the day.)

One of my Narragansett turkey hens hatched a brood of 15 young a couple of days ago. She is an excellent mother. I have her and her brood in a large pen and it is truly wonderful to watch them. On more than one occasion, I have been reminded, as I watch them, of the Audubon print of wild turkeys.

Best regards,

Dear Susan:

Enclosed is a copy of the e-mail message that I received on May 15th that we spoke about on the phone today. I have not replied to this message, and will not do so.

When I first read the name of the sender, I thought that it might be from you. But on second reading, it became very clear that you would never send such a message and that everything about the message is wrong for it to have been written by you.

I showed the message to my colleague Ginger Sosik, who served as hostess during Martha Stewart's visit to Bloomsburg. Ginger guessed that it was probably a trick on the part of a tabloid newspaper to get me to talk about Martha's visit here.

There was a very pushy photographer in the crowd at Bloomsburg. He had a fancy camera and equipment and shot a great deal of footage in the course of the day. With all those photographs and with some direct quotes from me (which he didn't get), a sleazy operator could create any story that he wanted to—and sell it to anyone.

How did this Susan get my e-mail address? Very few people have my e-mail address, even fewer people know that my first name is Silas. How did this Susan know that we gave Martha a gift?

(Probably just as guess. Martha probably gets gifts everywhere she goes.) Why does this Susan want to see pictures? Why does this Susan want to know what Martha ate/said/did? Why does this Susan not use her last name? (Is this Susan trying to make me think that she is you?)

I would be interested to know anything that Martha Stewart's publicist can learn about this very peculiar e-mail message.

Dear Bill, #8825

Refund Check received; sorry to learn that your standard Partridge Rock hens are not laying well. In that same regard, my Rose comb Rhode Island Red standards drove me crazy this spring: lots of eggs but most of them infertile. I changed roosters in the breeding pens. Still nothing. Fertility in all other pens was very good.

It seems that as soon as you solve one poultry problem, another one

Dear Bill,

The generous quantity of material (very nicely laid out; good print quality) in the June POULTRY PRESS on the CPAC's 1997 Spring Auction and Show is wonderful! Thank you very much.

Four CPAC show pictures on page one! Your article and all those photographs! My article! Two pages of ads! All that planning and work have paid off. It was the biggest and best show that the CPAC has ever had.

We are very pleased that you could be there and that everyone had a great time.

Sincerely,

S. Robert Powell

The Central Pennsylvania Avian Club hosted the American Bantam Association Semi-Annual meet. It was held at Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania at the fairgrounds on May 3-4, 1997.

This was our first trip to Bloomsburg and it was a tremendous weekend. We've heard a lot about this show but never had the opportunity to attend. The building on the fairgrounds are absolutely beautiful. They had the majority of the chickens in the one building that produced natural light and it really gave every opportunity to the birds to be seen.

They had a Chinese auction to sell your birds and whatever and it was very well attended. Lots of birds went through the auction.

This was their 21st annual show and I feel the American Bantam Association made a wise choice in holding their semi-annual at Bloomsburg. Everyone in the organization for the Mottled Old English Game Bantams and it was judged by New ABA Vice President Ralph Sheriff, Jr. If my memory serves me right, I think that Dave Lorigren from Rhode Island had best and reserve of variety on two females. If I'm wrong, I apologize to whoever I left out. I know Bob PaJulia was extremely happy to finally get them into the Standard. The birds that we have seen shown are really nice and some were extremely typy like they are supposed to be. My personal opinion was I thought the females were much better than the males.

When I received the catalog to print, I saw that there would be a special appearance by Martha Stewart. I had to ask Joyce who she was, since I don't watch TV. She told me who she was and the catalog had in it that she would pick the most beautiful bird in the show. Finding out that she raised chickens made quite an impression on me, because anyone who raises poultry are number one in my book! Seeing her at the show and spending the entire day also made another impression on me and she drew quite a crowd all day. The most beautiful bird picked by Martha Stewart was a White Crested Blue Polish by Joel and Ellen Henning. Congratulations Joel and Ellen. Martha took time with the exhibitors and non-exhibitors to sign autographs in her book or anything that they had to write on. I know that past president Johnny Batson spent a lot of time with her and the birds. Johnny was a disc jockey back many years ago and worked with Martha very well. To Martha Stewart, I want to personally thank you for attending this show. You gave the poultry fancy a big, big boost, not only by talking about it when you were on the Jay Leno show the following week but with the specials that you will incorporate into your shows. This is a special thank you from one poultry fancier to another.

Another special thank you to S. Robert Powell for making all the contacts for Martha coming to the Show and providing many activities for her.

The Central Pennsylvania Avian Club had over 1500 birds for Jeff Halbach, Pat Malone, Rick Porr and Jerry Yeaw to judge in the open show. Dr.

Charles Wabeck judged the Junior Show and Junior Showmanship.

Attending banquets is not one of my favorite things to do, only because after being on my feet, Livezey taking reserve, Junior Showmanship winner was Joshua Minnich with Kristina Carle winning reserve. In the Novice Showmanship Annie Soergel won with Ashley Tindall taking reserve. The scoring was very close in each division as these Junior Exhibitors know their birds.

In the Junior Show, it was a Gray Call Young Female winning Grand Champion Waterfowl by a Junior and it was won by Sean Kane. Reserve Grand Champion Waterfowl by a Junior was a Gray Call Old Male by Sean Kane. Grand Champion Large Fowl by Junior was a Black Cochon Hen by Kristina

Well, the American Bantam

Association Semi-Annual meet is now history and it was a great one. The Central Pennsylvania Avian Club can feel completely happy about the job they did putting on the show. As I said in the article, I was impressed with the show and facilities. We definitely will be back. Until then, best to all.

American Bantam Association - was successful, and Mottled Old English Game Bantams are now an officially recognized variety by the American Bantam Association.

Excellent Show Buildings
The poultry building at Bloomsburg is one of the best buildings anywhere for a poultry show: wide aisles, abundant natural daylight, a first-class fluorescent light system, good ventilation.

All of the standard and bantam chickens were displayed in the main poultry building. Also in this main show hall were (1) the American Bantam Association's information table, manned by ABA President Larry Peterson

CENTRAL PENNSYLVANIA AVIAN CLUB'S 1997 SPRING SHOW AND AUCTION

By S. Robert Powell

On the first weekend in May at the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds, excitement was in the air. It was an almost tangible excitement, and it was apparent from the opening of the poultry building at 7 A.M. on Saturday, May 3rd, until long after coop-out time on Sunday morning, May 4th.

First-Class Show

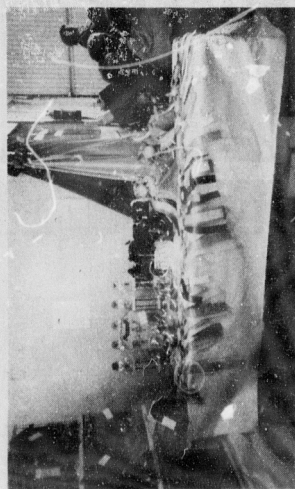

What could cause all this excitement? Perhaps the most obvious cause was that a first-class poultry show, sponsored by the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club, was in progress. The show was housed both in the poultry building and the dog-show building next door, which were filled to capacity with over 1,500 birds shown by 150 exhibitors for the CPAC's 21st annual spring show.

The 1997 semiannual meet of the American Bantam Association took place in conjunction with the show. A special feature of that meet was the qualifying meet for Mottled Old and Secretary Eleanor Vinhage, (2) American Poultry Association table with Lorna Rhodes at the table, and (3) the Poultry Press table, manned by Bill, Joyce and David Wulff.

Next door to the show hall was the second show building. The club had never used this building before, but it turned out to be an excellent facility in which to show birds, especially waterfowl and turkeys. The standard ducks, turkeys, and geese were displayed in the ample, sturdy, and viewer-friendly cages on the right side of the building. The bantam waterfowl and the junior show were housed on the main floor. The remainder of the space in the building was used by vendors, breed and specialty clubs, and poultry organizations.

In keeping with the special nature of the show, the cages were all skirted. In addition, the show hall was embellished with a wide array of annual flowers in bloom. These flowers were distributed throughout the building on the tops of the show cages. Jerry Scott's cut-flower arrangement in the form of a chicken was displayed on top of Champions' Row. This floral arrangement was admired by many people and was presented to Jane Edington at the conclusion of the show.

Show Secretary Briget Kane, assisted by Adrienne Blankenship, arranged a very attractive award table on which were displayed the etched glass plates to be awarded to the class and show champions, the custom rosettes, as well as the Best of Breed and Reserve of Breed buttons for both the open and junior shows.

Also displayed on the award table were special show awards created by club members. Don Emery's commemorative wooden plaques were present and so was Dick Laabs' figure of a Japanese bantam female. The figure was molded in solid pewter and was awarded to the Best Japanese Bantam Female in the show.

Special thanks to Paul Slusser and Fred Trump of the Bloomsburg Fair's board of directors for making available these excellent facilities for CPAC spring show and auction.

Martha Stewart

An additional cause of excitement was the presence of Martha Stewart and a five-person television crew in the show halls and on the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds all day on Saturday. Martha Stewart, guru of fine living, author, and nationally known television personality, has raised poultry for many years. She visited the show at the invitation of the club for the purpose of selecting "the most beautiful bird in the show."

Footage her film crew shot of the poultry show and auction will be broadcast on the Martha Stewart television program this fall.

Accompanied by ABA judge Johnny Batson, Martha Stewart examined all of the birds in the show and selected a White Crested Blue Polish Bantam hen as "the most beautiful bird in the show." This Polish hen was exhibited by Joel and Ellen Henning of Colden, New York, who were awarded a rosette by Martha Stewart for their win.

The first runner-up in the most beautiful bird contest was a standard White Rock hen shown by Shelby and Eddie Harrington of Twin Cedar Farm, Houston, DE.

S. Robert Powell served as host for the Martha Stewart visit. Special thanks to Virginia Sosik, who served as hostess and assisted Robert Powell with all of the arrangements for this day-long, high-profile visit by one of America's most discerning fanciers of things natural and beautiful.

This special appearance by Martha Stewart at the show was clearly the magical ingredient that transformed what is invariably an interesting and exciting annual event into an unforgettable experience for all concerned.

Friendly Show

There was also much excitement in the air because of the exuberant interaction among the CPAC members, the exhibitors, and the hundreds of visitors of the show halls.

The Bloomsburg show has a reputation of being a very friendly show, which is perhaps why people always come back to Bloomsburg.

Poultry shows are about the same, but they are also about the different. The Bloomsburg club does not overlook the needs and efforts of the exhibitors and visitors to the show. At Bloomsburg, there are always many places to sit down and rest, or visit with friends.

Many Activities

So many different activities together helped to keep the excitement level high throughout the two days of the show: meets by the APA and the ABA and a long list of breed and specialty clubs; an ABA qualifying meet for Mottled Old English Game Bantams; a Junior Show, a Junior Showmanship Class, a Live-Bird Auction; a wide variety of vendors displaying poultry supplies for sale; a Chinese Auction; a 50/50 Drawing; a food stand featuring a wide assortment of homemade goods; a banquet; and last - although certainly not least - the competition for "the most beautiful bird in the show" as judged by Martha Stewart.

The CPAC's live-bird and poultry supplies auction is arguably the best auction on the East coast for exhibition poultry. The Reverend Roland Romig has served the CPAC as auctioneer for many years, and his knowledge of poultry, together with his skills as an auctioneer, make the auction a pleasure for all concerned.

Held in the Arena on Saturday, a very successful live-bird auction was conducted in a new auction format for the CPAC. The birds were sold, they were returned to their boxes, which were provided by the consignors. The boxes were then picked up by the individual buyers.

Special thanks to the Reverend Roland Romig and his capable assistants for conducting this very successful auction.

Food

Food for exhibitors and visitors at a poultry show is important. The in-house food stand this year was under the capable direction of Molly and Andy Casazza.

In addition, a first-class banquet was held on Saturday night on the fairgrounds in the Arts and Crafts building. The banquet, attended by more than 115 people, was catered by Jilly's Restaurant (Irene and Jill Shaw) of Sweet Valley, PA. The primary menu items were Chicken Francais, Virginia Ham, and the stuffed shells. A special feature of the banquet was the beautiful and delicious cake that was embellished with the logo of the American Bantam Association.

SPPA Booth

Another special feature of the show this year was the display that was set up by the Society for the Preservation of Poultry Antiquities. SPPA president Craig Russell manned the booth. On display was an original painting of Red Dorkings by C. Richard Getz, son of the noted poultry artist Roy Getz. The SPPA will have one thousand signed and numbered prints made of this painting and will sell them for the benefit of the SPPA.

The C. Richard Getz painting of Red Dorkings was officially unveiled at the show by Martha Stewart.

Thank You

The success of this show was, in a large measure, the result of the dedicated, enthusiastic, and tireless work of Show Secretary Briget Kane, President Mark Whitebread, and Treasurer Mark Burns, all of whom put in hundreds of hours of work before, during, and after the show to guarantee success. Sincere and heartfelt thanks to them all from all CPAC members and exhibitors for an outstanding job. Well done!

Special thanks to the officers and directors of the Sussex County (N.J.) Poultry Association for lending the CPAC the additional cages to house the many birds shown at this important event.

Special thanks also (1) to Arlene Sliker and Kim Weaver for conducting the Chinese Auction, (2) to Benton Roller Mills for donating the feed and shavings needed for the show, and (3) to Jerry Scott for inscribing in his fine calligraphic hand the CPAC cash prize and special envelopes for the show. Over $1,000 in cash show prizes and special were awarded.

Reviews

A great many exhibitors and visitors to the show and auction sponsored by the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club reported that this was the best poultry weekend they had ever experienced. The word "wonderful" was used by many people to describe the event.

Follow-up press coverage of the show was excellent. The show and auction were page-one, top-of-the-page stories in both the Bloomsburg Press Enterprise and the Harrisburg Patriot-News.

In addition, the show and auction were mentioned on The Tonight Show on May 9, 1997. Martha Stewart was one of Jay Leno's guests and having had experience in evaluating her own poultry - as well as judging poultry under the direction of Johnny Batson at the Bloomsburg show - Martha Stewart evaluated a live bird that was brought on stage. During the discussion with Jay Leno on nationally broadcast television, Martha Stewart remarked that she had "had the best time last Saturday. . . (at) the Central Pennsylvania Avian Show."

Martha Stewart's visit to the 1997 Bloomsburg show was truly "a good thing" for the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club and for the exhibition poultry hobby in general.

Fall Show and Auction

The CPAC will sponsor a 1997 fall show and auction the third weekend of October. Briget Kane (304-788-5555) will serve as secretary of the poultry show. The judges for the poultry show have not yet been selected. David Stiles (717-465-3207) will serve as the secretary of the pigeon show. The judges of the pigeon show will be Terry Fick and Muard Naugle.

RE: Laryngotracheitis vaccine
Schering-Plough, LT-IVAX, serial # 89-194, expires 02-10-1998

DATE: July 7, 1997

Here is the laryngotracheitis vaccine. Vaccinate all of your birds. Use this vaccine and pass it on to the next person. Vaccinate your birds as soon as you get the vaccine. Keep the vaccine cold. I have already vaccinated my birds, so I don't need the remaining vaccine when everyone has finished using it. There should be enough in this bottle for everyone to do all their birds.

HOW TO VACCINATE

Vaccination for LT by the EYEDROP METHOD is conducted by allowing one full drop of rehydrated vaccine to fall into the open eye of the bird and hold until the bird swallows. Hold dropper bottle in vertical position throughout vaccination to avoid wasting vaccine.

CAUTION

1. For veterinary use only.
2. Vaccinate only healthy birds. Although disease may not be evident, coccidiosis, chronic respiratory disease, mycoplasma infection, lymphoid leukosis, infectious bursal disease, Marek's disease, or other disease conditions may cause serious complications or reduce protection.
3. An eye reaction may be noticed if birds are incubating coryza or other infectious organisms, or if there is excess ammonia or dust in the air of the housing facilities.
4. In outbreak situations, vaccinate healthy birds first, progressing toward outbreak areas in order to vaccinate diseased birds last.
5. Do not spill or spatter the vaccine. Use entire contents of vial when first opened. Burn empty bottles, caps and all unused vaccine and accessories.
6. Do not dilute the vaccine or otherwise stretch the dosage.
7. Store at 2° to 7°C (35° to 45°F).
8. Do not vaccinate within 21 days before slaughter.

The blood was shipped this morning, via Express Mail, to the State Veterinary Lab in Summerdale. Let's all keep our fingers crossed and hope that everyone gets a clean bill of health.

As you can see from the attached postal receipt, it cost $19.40 to ship the blood. I hope that you will all be willing to share in the cost of the postage. Don't mail your $5 to me. Rather, hand it to me when you see me again.

All birds have to be vaccinated against laryngotracheitis, as you know. I will get a bottle of vaccine (enough to do 1,000 birds) and make it available to anyone who wants to use it. I will do so in the next week or two. All birds must be vaccinated at least one month before they are shown.

CLEAN-UP SESSION

The poultry building on the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds is more than half cleaned following the CPAC's spring show.

Five of us showed up for the first clean up session on May 24th: Mark Whitebread, Mark Burns, Craig Russell, Harold Strawser, and S. Robert Powell.

The job can be finished in one more good session.

Another work session has been scheduled for Saturday, July 19th, beginning at 10 A.M. If we all do our share, no one will feel exploited, abused, or taken advantage of, and the job will be quickly finished. DO YOUR SHARE. BE THERE!

NEW MEMBERS

We are pleased to welcome the following persons into membership in the CPAC:

CHESTER and LAURA GAUGLER, 833 Lightstreet Road, Bloomsburg, PA 17815 (Family membership)

JIM KERSTETTER, R. D.

1, Box 62, Sunbury, PA 17801.

NJ 08324.

NORA and RAY

REINER, R. D. 2, Box 232R,
Selinsgrove, PA 17870.

THE 1997 SPRING SHOW AND AUCTION

The CPAC's 1997 Spring Show was the largest (1,500 birds shown by 150 exhibitors) and best show in the club's 23-year history.

The Spring Show and Auction were page-one, top-of-the-page stories in the Sunday, May 4, 1997 issues of the Bloomsburg Press Enterprise and the Harrisburg Patriot-News.

On Friday, May 9, 1997, Martha Stewart was a guest on The Tonight Show. In a conversation with Jay Leno, Martha Stewart remarked that she had "had the best time last Saturday [at] the Central Pennsylvania Avian show. . .” This may well have been the first time that a poultry show was ever mentioned on national television. What a boost for the exhibition poultry hobby!

Footage that was shot by the Martha Stewart film crew at the CPAC’s spring show and auction will be broadcast on Martha Stewart’s television show this fall. Specific dates of broadcast of this footage will very probably be listed in Martha Stewart’s monthly magazine, Martha Stewart Living.

The June 1997 issue of POULTRY PRESS contains two articles on the show and auction—one by Bill Wulff and one by S. Robert Powell—and 49 photographs of the show that were taken by Bill Wulff. Four of those photographs are on page one! There are, in addition, almost two full pages of space ads that were placed by individuals and organizations.

This is the most extensive press coverage in POULTRY PRESS (about six full pages of CPAC material) that has ever been given to a CPAC show! When you see or speak to Bill Wulff and his family, be sure to thank them for the excellent coverage of our spring show and auction in POULTRY PRESS.

Sincere thanks to all who contributed in any way to the success of the show and auction.

Editorial

ANNUAL VACCINATING AND BLOODTESTING

By S. Robert Powell

The annual ordeal of vaccinating against laryngo-tracheitis and testing for pullorum-typhoid begins, for many of us, in early summer.

In an effort to get a head start on the process, I devoted the entire day on May 17th to testing the flocks of seven regular exhibitors at the annual Harford Fair and elsewhere.

The blood was shipped to Harrisburg on Monday morning the 19th from the main Scranton post office. The blood was not tested in the labs at Summerdale until Thursday the 22nd.

Not surprisingly, more than half of the blood samples were declared to be “unacceptable”—through no fault of my own—when they were finally tested in the lab! The result, of course, is that the blood had to be drawn again. Very maddening. But what can you do?

[The flocks whose samples were declared “unacceptable” were again bloodtested on June

21-22, and the blood was shipped via express mail to the Summerdale labs on June 23rd. To date, July 12, no reports have been received by the flock owners in question! I tested seven additional flocks on July 5-6 and shipped that blood, via express mail, on July 7th.]

Don't get me wrong. Testing is a good thing, to be sure. But it sure would be pleasant if the commonwealth's Department of Agriculture were more supportive of the exhibition poultry hobby.

A good part of the problem with testing the blood from exhibition flocks is that it invariably, so it seems, gets pushed to the back burner if blood from commercial flocks is to be tested.

I do, of course, understand that the commercial poultry industry can lose huge sums of money as the result of an outbreak of avian influenza. But what about us, the exhibition poultry people? Must we always be last?

It makes me angry, very angry. My plan at present is to bring all this to the attention of the Governor (Tom Ridge), the newly appointed Secretary of Agriculture (Samuel E. Hayes, Jr.), and the members of the Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee in both the Pennsylvania House of Representatives and the Senate.

Enough is enough! It's time for action.

SUSSEX CAGES

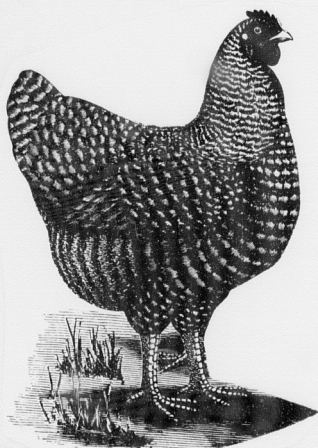

The CPAC borrowed all of the cages for our show that were set up in the dog-building from the Sussex County Poultry Fanciers' Association. We are very grateful to the Sussex group (Arlene Sliker, president) for allowing us to borrow the cages, which were returned on June 28th to the Sussex group.

To return the cages, S. Robert Powell rented a truck in Carbondale and then drove to Bloomsburg, where Craig Russell and Harold Strawser met him. In the 90+ degree heat, they loaded the truck. Carl Harris had planned to be there to help, but a last minute medical emergency in the family prevented his being there.

SRP then drove to Augusta, NJ, and met four members of the Sussex County Poultry Fanciers' Association (Jerry Sliker, Jim Coerts, Evan Engelsman, and Joe Zaleski).

The cages, wooden trays, and stands were then loaded into the Sussex group's trailer. SRP then drove back to Carbondale and returned the rental truck. (SRP left Carbondale at 9:30 A.M. and returned home at 9 P.M., having driven 279 miles.)

Special thanks, once again, to the Sussex County Poultry
Fanciers' Association for lending the CPAC these cages.

CPAC FALL SHOW

The CPAC's Fall Show (poultry and pigeons) will take place on October 19th. David Stiles will serve as the secretary of the pigeon show and Briget Kane will serve as the secretary of the poultry show.

The CPAC's Fall Auction will take place on October 18th. The Rev. Roland Romig will serve as auctioneer. The auction will be conducted in the Arena. The auction format will be identical to the one used for the 1997 Spring Auction.

At last year's Dutchess County Poultry Fanciers' Association show, June 16, 1996, in Rhineback, NY, Dick Langenbach was the honored guest. He was awarded a very impressive trophy, with a plaque which reads: "Guardian of the Hen Award 1996."

Governor Tom Ridge, Secretary of Agriculture Samuel E. Hayes, Jr., and the members of the Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee have got to be made aware of the fact that we, as breeders and exhibitors of poultry, need their support. If you know any of these people personally, pick up the phone and speak up for exhibition poultry.

Dear Martha,

Happy Birthday!

Every day when I get home from work, my nephew Donald reports on "what Martha

Stewart did on her show today."

Donald is becoming quite the cook.

A few days ago, he invited that we make a pie so he could show me "how Martha did the Cust."

The pie -- and its corbally fluted crust -- were a great success.

Sincerely,

Robert Powell

Dear Phyllis,

My mother had a grand time at this year's Fair. I took her with me every day. Since she broke her hip, she relies on a wheel chair to get around. I took her everywhere on the grounds and we had no problems anywhere.

People stopped and visited with her everywhere we went, and many kindnesses were extended to her by "the Fair family." She loves to sit in the shade pavilion and watch the passing parade or listen to the live music performances. Thanks for Selection of the mottled pattern can be made at hatching. Chicks with black down, white around wing tips, eyes and breast result in the best adult plumage. Beaks and shanks will also be dark.

Chicks of mostly white down with some black peppering, light shanks and beaks, will mature with solid white feathers in plumage. The lighter chicks should be separated and saved, as I believe they are the precursor to another variety, which will be discussed later.

Remember, the ideal Mottled Old English is basically a black bird with white feather tips. The bird should be dark with even mottling and good Old English type. Recommended standard color to achieve the perfect mottled pattern as described in the A.B.A. Standard of Perfection, shank and beak color must be dark.

I suggest the following standard for the Mottled Old English:

Comb, face and wattles-red

Beak-mottled

Shanks-mottled black (lighter in later years)

Toes-white or mottled

Defect-solid white feathering (exception male primaries two allowed.

Eyes-red

DEVELOPING THE MOTTLLED OLD ENGLISH GAME BANTAM

I have long admired the mottled pattern that we see today in many breeds such as Ancona, d'Uccle, Japanese, Cochins and others. This variety, to my surprise, is not available in the Old English. In 1987 I discussed the subject with Fred Jeffrey who felt that the variety could be created within the breed by crossing Spangled with Black.

The objective of the experiment was to create a strain of Mottled Old English Game bantams without going out of the breed — this way, type and size could easily be maintained.

The first cross was Black O.E. cock, from my line, on two Spangled O.E. hens obtained from a neighbor, Harry Barbour. All birds had excellent type and the Spangles had a nice pattern with not too much white.

This article is organized so that results are given from all the crosses and then at the end there will be a bit of genetic theorizing.

The first generation (F1) was hatched in the spring of 1988 and a description follows:

Chick down - black with brownish red underbelly. True Blacks have greyish underbelly.

Leg color - dark (blackish).

Juvenile feathers - black with red speckling.

Adult plumage - Two males had black bodies with red hackle and saddle. Two females were totally black.

1989 MATINGS

Two crosses were made — first generation male with first generation females, and first generation male back to Spangled. Offspring were classified into groups:

Type A - Down color, black with white underbelly and white wing edges. Slate legs; dark eyes; black beak. Juvenile plumage was black with red speckling. Adult plumage like first generation.

Type B - Down color like Spangled; white legs; light horn beak; light eyes. Juvenile plumage was spangled and adult plumage mottled with light hackle and saddle.

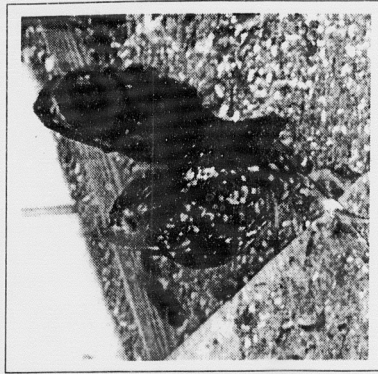

Type C and D - Down color, black with white belly, wing tips and white spot on head and white around eyes. Legs were white with pinkish bottom and light slate tops. Pinkish white beak; dark red eyes. Juvenile plumage was mottled, some red in males but no red in females. Adult plumage: females were mottled. Males were mottled with red in hackle and saddle.

1990 MATINGS

Mottled female crossed with brother gave mottled females with no red and mottled males with red in hackle and saddle.

GENETICS

The fact that after 3 generations mottled males still had considerable red in hackle and saddle is good proof that we are not dealing with a simple inheritance of black. Red in hackle of black males is very common following cross breeding and this experiment is no different than many others which have been reported. That mottling (mo mo) is a simple recessive is confirmed in these crosses. It is also confirmed that the mottling gene is responsible for the spangling in the Spangled O.E. It is likely that the Spangled O.E. carries a gene for dark red which possibly is mahogany (Mh). Geneticists are just beginning to realize how complicated is the inheritance of black. Until we know more on what the E gene (extended black) looks like, it will not be possible to know how other genes interact to cover up red. Two such genes for black, M1 (melanotic) and sg (recessive black) have been identified but there are probably more.

CROSSES FOR THE PROPER MOTTLLED PATTERN

The development of the mottled Old English is no longer postulation. The remaining function is to improve the color pattern to meet the A.B.A. standardized description without major defect. Selection of standard eye, shank and beak color remains open at this time.

Achieving the standard pattern is no mystery, however it does require proper selection of parental stock for continued breeding. The initial cross to the spangled parent is necessary to obtain the desired genetic imprint for mottling on a black background. Once the initial cross is made, the breeder should never go back to the spangled parent because it will prolong the existence of the red factor. Selection of black offspring for future crosses is desired for successful accomplishment of the proper color and pattern. The phenotype of the offspring need not be mottled, as the (mo) gene is recessive.

Crossing of the offspring will result in the desired phenotype in the F2 and F3 generations. Selection of breeding stock should be based on the following: no solid white feathers, dark shanks, dark beak, O.E. type and vigor. It is preferable to use a solid black parent with the (mo) factor, then one with solid white plumage, light shanks and beak.

A. P. A. JUDGES' SECTION

JUDGE APPRENTICE PROGRAM

by Pat Malone,

Judges' Section President

As a licensed A.P.A. and A.B.A.

judge, I am a product of the apprentice program both in the A.P.A. and the A.B.A. I have very positive feelings about the apprentice program, and I feel a strong responsibility to help teach and train others as I was helped. It concerns me then to hear some attack the judge license candidates and/or judges trying to help them learn.

"That apprentice influenced the judge's decision" is one criticism I have heard. All I can say is that I have never had a judge candidate try to influence any of my decisions. True, we talk about a lot of individual birds, but just because we are talking about specific birds doesn't mean the candidate is trying to influence me as the judge. How can that apprentice learns, without asking questions, making comments, etc.? In my opinion the worst thing that can happen is for an apprentice judge to spend all day clerking, doing nothing but writing down how birds are placed. Little, if any, learning can take place without the dialogue.

"I wish that judge would quit talking and get the judging finished." Yes, working with an apprentice judge does slow down the judging process, if it is done right. And I know that exhibitors want the judge(s) to get through so they can get home. To me we have to take both the judging and the training of the apprentice into consideration. Show management needs to be realistic in their expectations as to how many birds a judge can handle and work with an apprentice judge at the same time. This is true whether we are talking about a local club or an annual or semi-annual show.

Of the eight judges I worked with when I was a judge candidate, only three were good teachers. Though I could get credit only one time for each judge, I worked with these three every chance I got in order to learn. Some people are very knowledgeable but are not good communicators. Some judges do not want to try to do two things at once and thus do not want to participate with apprentices. So the number of judges willing to help judge candidates is limited.

Changes and improvements in the judge apprentice program have been made and are being made. I am certainly not under the delusion that the program is perfect. But I do believe that it is effective and that it is important. So I urge you to be understanding and supportive of both judge candidates and judges trying to help the apprentices learn when you see these folks working together at poultry shows.

If you have suggestions for improving the apprentice program I urge you to submit them to Charles Oltersdorf, Chairman of our A.P.A. Judge License Committee, or to me at 5609 Woodvine Court, Fort Worth, TX 76140, Fax #817-478-8245

MINUTES

Board of Director's Meeting
American Poultry Association, Inc.
17th Semi-Annual Meet & Convention
Friday, May 9, 1997
Three Rivers Inn
Centerville, Michigan

The meeting was called to order at 7:00 p.m. by President Halbach. Members present included: Vi Halbach, President; Harry Halbach proxy for Bart Pais Vice-President; Directors: District 1 - Robert Rhodes; District 2 - Dick Horstman proxy for Don Kral; District 3 - Barb Piper; District 4 - Tommy Stanley; District 6 - Fred Zillich; District 9 - Al Watts; District 10 - Ralph Beamer; District 12 - Danny Padgett; and Lorna Rhodes, Secretary-Treasurer. District 7 - Pat Malone, District 11 - Rico Sebastianelli arrived after the meeting had started.

President Halbach led the opening prayer. District 3 Director, Barbara Piper welcomed the Board to the state of Michigan on behalf of the Michigan Poultry Breeders Association.

It was motioned by Tommy Stanley and seconded by Harry Halbach that the minutes of the Annual meeting be accepted as printed in the Winter News and Views. The motion carried without opposition.

Bids for the 1998 Semi-Annual Meet and Convention. Paul Monteith presented the bid for the 1998 Semi-Annual to be held in Sarnia, Ontario April 17 & 18, 1998. Al Watts asked about the procedure for getting birds across the border. The procedure was explained and discussed. In the absence of Walt Leonard, Al Watts presented the bid from the Greater California Society of Poultry Fanciers. The vote on a written ballot was 3-4 was to have our 1998 Semi-annual on February 21-22, 1998 at the Greater California Show in Fresno, California. Ralph Beamer motioned and Dick Horstman seconded that the ballots be destroyed. The motion carried without opposition.

Secretary's Report. The secretary reported a large number of new members coming from Murray Mc Murray an average of 4 or 5 a week. The office is pretty much settled and the show reports have been sent to Rico. Discussion of kind of mail and requests received.

Treasurer's Report. As of April 15 the checkbook balance was $8,874.96. The Certificates of Deposit as deposited are $144,292.31, including and ETL principal of $27,415. The savings account is $554.38. Harry Halbach motioned to accept and Barbara Piper seconded. Voted without opposition.

Judges' Licensing Committee Report. Harry Halbach read the committee's report. The Committee reported little activity since the last report in Minnesota.

They have one A.B.A. Judge, Jim Wallace of South Carolina, that has passed the Large Fowl and Bantam exam and is now A.P.A. licensed. They also have one apprentice, Chris Maddalena, that has passed the A.P.A. General exam and is now A.P.A. licensed.

They had two apprentices that failed the exam and both are eligible to retake the exam at this time. Michael Becker of Canada will be re-taking the exam at the Centerville Show. Chris Boshoff of South Africa has taken the exam at Greenville, Ohio but the results are not back yet. We have one apprentice that is at exam ready status but no date has been set at this time. He is S. Robert Powell of Pennsylvania. We have four new apprentices, they are James Carson of Canada, Brian Decker of Kingston, Brian Knox of New Hampshire and Rev. Roland Romig of Pennsylvania. We have a total of 16 apprentices at this time.

Committee on Youth Judging Pamphlet. Cletti Agler presented the sample booklet prepared by Barbara Gromacki and committee. It has 5 chapters and is easy to read. A committee consisting of Cletti, Rico Sebastianelli and Pat Malone will review the pamphlet and report back at the extended meeting.

Cletti also gave an up date report on the 1998 Annual Meet and Convention to be held in Columbus, Ohio. Columbus is expecting the National Meets of about 25 Breed Clubs, as well as the A.P.A. and the A.B.A. Poultry Press is fully sponsoring the National Youth Show. Youth showmanship will be judged Saturday. History will be stressed to the youth.

Yearbook Committee. Chairperson Loma Rhodes reported more ads this year. The yearbook is partially in the hands of the publishers. The Yearbook should be mailed sometime in July.

Promotion and Sales. Barbara Piper reported the receipt of 20,000 brochures from Paw Paw Press the lowest of 3 bidders. Poultry Press contributed $200 and the rest of the expense was borne by the A.P.A. alone, thus using most of our advertising budget. Ad in Countryside renewed. Lyle Baumgarten is still working on trading articles for advertising.

Constitution and By-Laws Committee. Chairperson Al Watts reported that the committee is going to resubmit the changes presented in Minnesota and printed in the spring News and Views. Discussion followed.

Show Reports/Awards. Rico Sebastianelli reported all the 1996 reports were entered into the computer. Master Exhibitor points were ready for the yearbook. We have 27 new Master Exhibitors, 228 Grand Master of awards and 4 new Hall of Fame awards. A discussion of the awards system followed. Rico also reported on his trip to Massachusetts in January during which he set up the A.P.A. computer to make the awards system more manageable. Al Watts motioned and Ralph Beamer seconded a vote of thanks to Rico and Loma. It was voted without opposition.

Membership Committee. Bob Rhodes reported that new memberships continue to come. Receiving an average of 5 or 6 a week from Murray McMurray. Rico brought up the subject of how to encourage Canadian membership. A committee of Vi Halbach, Bob Rhodes, Ralph Beamer and Rico Sebastianelli was formed to investigate and develop ideas.

Internet. Written report from Bart Pals. It is hard to believe that we have now been on line for one year. When the adventure began I knew absolutely nothing. However, through the help of Rico Sebastianelli, Sam Brush and a number of other members we have been able to be on line and continue to grow.

To date we have had over ten thousand visitors to our home page. That number is completely UNbelievable to me. I am not sure what I expected, but 10,000 was not the figure I was expecting.

We have added a number of items like the Junior Page, poultry information, what is a poultry show, and most recently we have added a hyper-link to breed clubs. In the beginning we decided NOT to hyper-link to other poultry related sites. We do feel it is a nice service to breed clubs to help with their awareness. We have set a fee of $10 a year for this hyper-link. We will continue to add ONLY breed clubs to our home page. At the present time we have two, The Dominique Club and Favorite Fanciers of America.

We had an application for our home page for the youth program. Much interest was stirred by it but for some reason Lamar and Joy requested it be removed.

It is our hope for the future to offer this application to our regular membership. I think we can rest assured that this was an adventure that was well worth the effort. We have reached a whole group of people. Having over 13 visits a day, each and every day, tells us that we are reaching somebody.

Please feel free to offer any ideas or suggestions.

This report was followed by a discussion of the Junior program. The information on the Internet needs cleaning. Rico will see to it.

Standard Revision Committee. Chairperson Pat Malone stated the colored slides had been received on April 29. The binding will be improved. The indexing still has to be done. Barbara Piper asked about bids. Two have been received.

Old Business. The Secretary reported having several old pins and medals in inventory. Motion made by Dick Horstman and seconded by Harry Halbach to save one for historical value and to price and sell the rest. Bob Rhodes to set the price.

Our Endowment Trust Life membership is currently $175. The President asked that the members of the Board consider raising it to $200 at the meeting in Tucson. Harry Halbach suggested it be $250. The reason being the continued escalation of mailing costs.

The headquarters at Tucson will be the Best Western, Inn-at-the-Airport. Phone 1-800-772-3847. Say that you are with the Tucson Poultry Club.

New Business. Walt Leonard suggested the honorees for Tucson be Dave Sherrill, Gene Halbach and C.C. "Mo" Wisdom. Pat Malone moved and Danny Padgett seconded approval of the suggestion. Motion passed without opposition.

The President will appoint a committee to consider special awards for the 125th anniversary show in Columbus. The committee will present ideas to the Board at Tucson.

Harry Halbach motioned to adjourn. Allen Watts seconded. Motion passed without opposition. Meeting adjourned 9:27 P.M.

Board of Directors Meeting (continued) Saturday, May 10, 1997 Three Rivers Inn

President Halbach called the continued meeting to order at 8:00 p.m.

Rico Sebastianelli reported on the showmanship pamphlet. Reference to the A.B.A. will be removed and some of the charts simplified and cover changed. Motion made by Rico Sebastianelli and seconded by Fred Zillich to accept the pamphlet with changes. Voted without opposition. Rico will make the changes. It is to be printed by the University of Wisconsin @ $025 per sheet with approximately 20 pages, with about 2,500 copies printed. The President and Secretary will determine the cost. Judges will be charged the same as others. Motioned by Ralph Beamer and seconded by Dick Horstman. Voted without opposition.

Allen Watts reported that his committee agreed to go ahead with the constitution and by-law changes to be voted on at Tucson. Their suggested method of voting is vote on one proposal at a time. First those in favor will stand, then those opposed. Pat Malone motioned and Harry Halbach seconded the motion to adjourn. Since Die at 8:15 p.m. Voted without opposition.

Minutes General Membership Meeting American Poultry Association, Inc. 17th Semi-Annual Meet & Convention Saturday, May 10, 1997 Three Rivers Inn, Centerville, Michigan

It was determined that a quorum was present and the meeting was called to order at 7:30 p.m. by President Halbach.

Pat Malone led the meeting in prayer. The welcome was given by District 3 Director, Barb Piper.

The President introduced the officers and directors who were present and thanked the Michigan Poultry Breeders for their hospitality.

Harry Halbach moved and Pat Malone seconded to accept the minutes of the 1996 Annual meeting in Minnesota as printed in the News and Views. Passed without opposition.

Dale English, Art Granger and Ruth Whitney were honored by the Association for their many years of service to the poultry fancy. Although none were able to attend the meeting, a summary of their achievements was read by the President. Ruth Whitney's award was accepted by her daughter.

Treasurer's Report. The checkbook balance is $8,874.96. Savings account is $554.38. The balance of certificates of deposit is approximately $144,292.31. Major expenses have been the moving of the office, a printer, MS Office and a phone/fax machine. Fred Zillich motioned and Bill Mayer seconded the Treasurer's report be accepted. Motion carried without opposition.

CPAC MEETING

This coming Sunday, September 14th, at 1 P.M., the CPAC will meet in the poultry building on the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds. The meeting will be under the direction of the club's president, Mark Whitebread.

The CPAC's Fall Auction and Show will take place on October 18th and 19th, respectively, and there is much to be done to get ready. See you there.

THE PIGEON SHOW

David Stiles, pigeon show secretary, produced and mailed out the pigeon show catalogue in August. If you are interested in showing pigeons and you have not received a show entry form, contact David at 717-465-3207.

The judges for the pigeon show will be Muard Naugle and Terry Fick. The entry fee is $2 per bird and the deadline for entries is October 1st. Mail your pigeon entries to David Stiles, R. R. 2, Box 2208, Hallstead, PA 18822.

THE POULTRY SHOW

Briget Kane is the poultry show secretary. The show catalogues will be mailed out on or before September 12th. Briget's phone number is 304-788-5555. Mail your poultry show entries to Briget Kane, Route 2, Box 241, Keyser, WV 26726.

The annual fall auction will take place on Saturday, October 18th, beginning at 10 A.M. The auction will probably take place in "the dog building" next to the poultry building. The Rev. Roland Romig will serve as auctioneer. The plan at present is to follow the same format for the auction that was used at the spring auction in the Arena, i.e., the birds will be put in show cages only immediately before they are sold. This means that consignors will be required to bring their sale birds to the auction in a box or crate for selling.

The judges for the fall poultry show will be Troy LaRoche and Tom Kane.

Molly and Andy Casazza will be in charge of the food stand for the auction and show.

MARTHA STEWART

Footage that was shot by the Martha Stewart film crew at the CPAC's 1997 Spring Show and Auction will probably be broadcast in the next couple of months. At the time of the show, Martha Stewart told the Editor that the footage would be broadcast "this fall."

Beginning on Monday, September 8th, Martha Stewart's television program will broadcast daily. Also on September 8th, the Martha Stewart webpage on the Internet will be activated.

I have had several conversations recently with the editor of the Martha Stewart webpage, so it seems that the CPAC material will probably be aired soon.

A detailed broadcast schedule will be given on the Martha Stewart webpage. If you have access to the Internet, you can probably find out for yourself exactly when the CPAC footage will be broadcast.

These broadcasts will be a BIG MOMENT for the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club and for the exhibition poultry hobby in general. If you have facilities for making a tape of the broadcast, do so.

CELEBRITY PIGEONS

Detective Simon (NYPD Blue) raises and flies Racing Homers.

The episode that was aired on August 26th is the one in which Detective Simon's starts work in the 15th precinct. In the midst of the always-crowded precinct office, Simon, at one point, talks on the phone about Homers. The conversation concerns a Red cock and a Blue Bar cock.

Simon's associates don't immediately realize that he's talking with someone about pigeons and the raised eyebrows and disbelieving looks on the faces of Simon's associates clearly indicate that they have misinterpreted the subject of Simon's phone conversation.

At the conclusion of his first day on the job, Detective Simon and some of his associates go out for a drink. At that time, Simon explains that he raises pigeons and that ten of his birds have done 500 miles, returning to New York from a release point in Maine.

In reply to a question from one of his colleagues, Detective Simon remarks: "Pigeons make good parents."

Simon's partner, Detective Siepowitz, reports that he raises salt water tropical fish.

Many uninformed people, of course, erroneously assume that all pigeons are dirty and that they are carriers of disease. To try to explain to such persons that exhibition and sporting pigeons, like any other bird or animal, are—when given half a chance—among the cleanest of God's creatures is about as futile an exercise as might be an effort to explain Aristotelian philosophy to a badger.

In any event, this very positive publicity for pigeons (Racing Homers) through the character of Detective Simon (Jimmy Smitts) is excellent for the hobby. The ease and naturalness with which Jimmy Smitts deals with pigeons suggests that he has/had direct experience with Homers.

FROSTBITTEN LEGS

In the March 1997 issue of this NEWSLETTER (pp. 3-4), we reprinted an article that Wilma Smith sent in about a rooster in Jackson, MI, that had been given a set of artificial legs.

Mrs. Smith sent in the follow-up article on that rooster that is given on the following page. She also enclosed the article by Amanda Covarrubias on brain cell transplants in quail that is given on the following page.

Special thanks to Wilma Smith for sending in these two articles.

'Mr. Chicken's' Fake Legs Apparently Couldn't Save Him From Predator

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — Mr. Chicken, a gamecock whose artificial legs brought him international fame, was mauled to death as he protected the hens in his pen.

"Something chewed him up real good," veterinarian Tim England said Friday. "The other chickens were OK, though. He was very protective of them."

England thinks the killer was likely a hungry raccoon who got into the pen late Thursday night.

Mr. Chicken was rescued last December amid sub-zero temperatures, his feet frozen beyond repair. England adopted the bird and had a Battle Creek physical therapist make Mr. Chicken a new pair of legs.

The plastic legs fit snugly over the stumps, with feet like nearly square platforms that curled up like a ski. They were removed at night, like most prosthetics, to prevent pressure sores.

Mr. Chicken had appeared in several national magazines, and in newspapers from South Africa to Hawaii. The media stories prompted letters from across the nation and as far away as London, Paris and South Africa, England said.

"It's a glum day," England said. "We will bury him in the flower garden with his legs on. He will get a headstone because he was a famous little guy."

Quail traits in brain cells transplanted

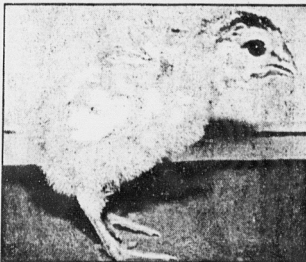

BY AMANDA COVARRUBIAS
OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN DIEGO — When is a chicken not a chicken? When it sings and bobs its head like a quail, thanks to an experimental brain-cell transplant.

In what sounds like something out of a B horror movie, Evan Balaban, an experimental neurobiologist at the Neurosciences Institute in San Diego, carried out the switch.

"The larger implications are what this will teach us about the development of brain circuits that produce behavior," Balaban said. He said the research could aid people with mental illness or brain diseases.

His research on Plymouth Rock chickens and Japanese quail was published Tuesday in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

SAN DIEGO UNION-TRIBUNE

The hatchlings look like chickens but bob their heads and sing like a quail.

After much trial and error, Balaban discovered that certain cells in the quail midbrain changed the animal's sound patterns, and other cells in the quail brain stem changed head movement during singing.

Balaban incubated fertilized quail and chicken eggs for 48 hours and then cut tiny windows in their shells. Cells in the chicken embryo were removed and substituted with corresponding quail brain cells.

Brady's Bits

After modeling a bit, Martha had a terrific career on Wall Street. Martha bailed out when she realized that the more sales she brought in, the more her commission was cut back. A home-based catering business was her professional launching pad, and it has been upward ever since. Recently, Martha almost got herself arrested. It seems she and the real-estate tycoon Harry Macklowe have a disputed boundary line between their properties in East Hampton, N.Y. One night toward 10 p.m., Martha was driving to her home when she spotted a construction crew erecting a fence along the boundary line in question. In the ensuing argument, a worker claimed to have been pinned against the fence by her car. But after the police investigated, the D.A., a sensible fellow—realizing that when someone starts building a fence along disputed property in the dark, there's something fishy—declined to prosecute. What I like is the image of a lone woman charging out to challenge a construction gang in the night. That's guts. That's Martha.

MARTHA STEWART

FEW PEOPLE ARE neutral on Martha Stewart. Time calls her one of the 25 "most influential Americans." TV Guide calls her "an icon, a phenom, a gag." A hostile biographer spews out bile. A neighbor sues.

Newsweek predicts that she'll be "the most important cultural figure of the 21st century."

During an earlier interview with Martha, she was forever talking about her need to "control" things in her big and growing business empire. Did that make her, as critics insist, "a control freak"? I asked somewhat hesitantly. No hesitation from Martha. "I am a control freak," she declared with a big smile. "I want to run things."

Martha starts running three more things tomorrow: Martha Stewart Living—her weekly TV show, distributed by Eyemark Entertainment—goes daily for a half-hour on nearly 200 stations coast to coast; her new Web site (www.marthastewart.com) goes online; and the Westwood One radio network begins airing a daily 60-second feature by Ms. Stewart.

"I can talk about anything I want," she told me, "starting with things people forgot or never knew: how to fold a flag or make a BLT sandwich or slice a tomato." And the first segment? "Your front door. Change the color of your front door, and you change your life!"

Wow! Then there is the core of her empire, the magazine called Martha Stewart Living. She already has 19 books, and the 20th, Martha Stewart's Healthy Quick Cook, comes out next month. And there's her deal to design an inexpensive line of paints and (in October) a new line of bedding

We got together at her Manhattan office. Martha showed me rough footage of the first episode of her new TV show. ("I mapped out the entire year of 180 shows before we began," she said. "When you break it down into segments, it seems more do-able.") There was her recent trip to Jamaica, demonstrating how they carve intricate wooden fretwork in one segment, how they harvest ripe fruits in the next. Then it was on to a poultry show in Pennsylvania

But won't viewers want celebrities showing up, as they did years ago on Dinah Shore's show? Not according to Martha. "We've learned that our audience wants experts. I don't want anybody on who does something I can do. If I can do it, then I'll be bored, and if I'm bored, the audience is bored. We'll have guest chefs on. We'll have furniture makers. A great furniture maker can be a celebrity."

MARTHA STEWART

FEW PEOPLE ARE neutral on Martha Stewart. Time calls her one of the 25 "most influential Americans." TV Guide calls her "an icon, a phenomenon, a gag." A hostile biographer spews out bile. A neighbor sues. Newsweek predicts that she'll be "the most important cultural figure of the 21st century."

During an earlier interview with Martha, she was forever talking about her need to "control" things in her big and growing business empire. Did that make her, as critics insist, "a control freak"? I asked somewhat hesitantly. No hesitation from Martha. "I am a control freak," she declared with a big smile. "I want to run things."

Martha starts running three more things tomorrow: Martha Stewart Living—her weekly TV show, distributed by Eyemark Entertainment—goes daily for a half-hour on nearly 200 stations coast to coast; her new Web site (www.marthastewart.com) goes online; and the Westwood One radio network begins airing a daily 60-second feature by Ms. Stewart.

"I can talk about anything I want," she told me, "starting with things people forgot or never knew: how to fold a flag or make a BLT sandwich or slice a tomato." And the first segment? "Your front door. Change the color of your front door, and you change your life!"

Wow! Then there is the core of her empire, the magazine called Martha Stewart Living. She already has 19 books, and the 20th, Martha Stewart's Healthy Quick Cook, comes out next month. And there's her deal to design an inexpensive line of paints and (in October) a new line of bedding.

Personal:

Born Martha Kostyra on Aug. 3, 1941, in Jersey City, N.J. Married to Andy Stewart, 1961-90; one daughter, Alexis, 31.

Career Highlights:

Include model, 1959-65; stockbroker, 1967-73; caterer, 1973-84. Lifestyle consultant for Kmart, 1987-. Founder and editor, Martha Stewart Living magazine, 1990-. Lifestyle tips on the TV shows Today, 1991-97; Martha Stewart Living, 1993-. CBS News This Morning, 1997-. Westwood One radio, 1997-.

Books:

Include Entertaining, 1982; Martha Stewart's Place and Tarts, 1983; The Wedding Planner, 1983; Martha Stewart's Garden Month by Month, 1991; Martha Stewart's Christmas, 1993; Martha Stewart's Menus for Entertaining, 1994; Holidays, 1994; Martha Stewart's Healthy Quick Cook, 1997.

and tabletop merchandise. And she'll still show up regularly on CBS News This Morning, as she used to do on NBC's Today.

We got together at her Manhattan office. Martha showed me rough footage of the first episode of her new TV show. ("I mapped out the entire year of 180 shows before we began," she said. "When you break it down into segments, it seems more do-able.") There was her recent trip to Jamaica, demonstrating how they carve intricate wooden fretwork in one segment, how they harvest ripe fruits in the next. Then it was on to a poultry show in Pennsylvania days a week and run a tomorrow and find out.

Dutch country, where Martha, who has long kept backyard flocks, handled prize roosters and hens and awarded a ribbon to "the most beautiful bird in show."

But won't viewers want celebrities showing up, as they did years ago on Dinah Shore's show? Not according to Martha. "We've learned that our audience wants experts. I don't want anybody on who does something I can do. If I can do it, then I'll be bored, and if I'm bored, the audience is bored. We'll have guest chefs on. We'll have furniture makers. A great furniture maker can be a celebrity."

Thanks for the copy of the page from "Parade" magazine with the Martha Stewart/chicken material.

The article suggests, incorrectly, that the CPAC chicken material would be in the first broadcast of the show. Not true. It will be broadcast on Thursday, September 18th.

This very positive publicity for the exhibition poultry hobby by one of the highest-profile national celebrities on national television is wonderful. I am very pleased that the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club has been able to make it possible.

The broadcast schedule for all of the upcoming Martha Stewart programs is on her webpage. Most of the programs have four different segments. On the 18th, there are only two segments: the field trip to the CPAC's show and auction, and a segment about folding shelves. The poultry coverage should be extensive.

I can hardly wait.

SEPTEMBER THURSDAY

18 FIELD TRIP:
CENTRAL PENNSYLVANIA
AVIAN CLUB

Twice a year, the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club sponsors a two-day exhibition of poultry, pigeons, and game birds. The event, which includes a lively auction, is designed to promote both ornamental fowl and utility birds (which are bred for meat and eggs).

Martha Stewart, an avid collector of rare poultry breeds, visits the event to pick the "Most Beautiful Bird" of the show (link to photo of White-Crested Blue Polish? – chosen in honour of her Polish heritage) from more than 2000 entries. John Batson, one of the event's lead judges, shows Martha how to evaluate competition fowl.

Keeping chickens can be a educational and productive project for the whole family. Tending a coop teaches children the basics of animal husbandry while it lets them enjoy the sometimes silly behavior of a brood of hens. Martha Stewart and poultry expert Quel Agland discuss the delights of raising beautiful ornamental chickens like the Silky, and champion egg-layers like New Hampshire Bantams and Orpingtons. She is especially fond of Araucanas and Americaunas for their marvelous blue- and green-shaded eggs. Chickens provide ample help to the home gardener by eating unwanted insects and weeds while fertilizing the soil.

Established in 1974, the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club (link to source) promotes all species of exhibition poultry, pigeons, game and cage birds. The next show takes place October 18-19, 1997 in Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania.

Dear Julie:

Thank you for the copy of the video of the Martha Stewart Living program for September 18, 1997. The televised record of Martha Stewart's field trip to the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club's 1997 spring show and auction is truly wonderful. We are very pleased.

The video and its broadcast on national television represent a very important event in the history of exhibition poultry in America. Never before has the hobby had such an enthusiastic endorsement on national television by such a high-profile poultry fancier as Martha Stewart.

The program has everything it should have. It's a very positive and enthusiastic presentation of the hobby. It whets the appetite of the spectator. It shows the interested spectator how to pursue the hobby, should he/she be interested in so doing. It presents the exhibition poultry hobby as a family experience. It shows the world out there that raising poultry for exhibition or for pleasure is a legitimate, interesting, and rewarding thing to do. It reminds the viewer that raising poultry is one of the many possible ways to connect to the natural and organic soil from which we have all sprung.

The background/support information on the Martha Stewart webpage, in addition, is very good.

You've thought of everything. Congratulations on a job very well done.

Dear Tom:

Here is the videotape that I spoke with you about on the phone last week. Please make 25 copies of the tape. If you can provide me with labels to attach to the tapes themselves and to the tape boxes, I would appreciate it.

This is a tape of an entire half-hour MARTHA STEWART LIVING television program, with gaps in the tape where the commercials were inserted. The program was aired on CBS on September 18, 1997.

Much of the footage was shot in the poultry building on the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds when Martha Stewart visited, at my invitation, our local poultry show and auction in May of this year.

When these copies are ready, please phone me at ICS (717-342-7701, ext. 283) and I will arrange to pick them up.

BLOOMSBURG FALL SHOW

By S. Robert Powell

The Central Pennsylvania Avian Club's 3rd Annual Fall Show will take place on October 19th. The show will be held in the poultry building on the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds.

Briget Kane (1-304-788-5555) is the poultry show secretary. Troy Laroche and Tom Kane will serve as the judges of the poultry show.

David Stiles (1-717-465-3207) is the pigeon show secretary. Terry Fick and Nuard Naugle will serve as the judges of the pigeon show.

On Saturday the 18th, the day before the Third Annual Fall Show, the Reverend Roland Romig, beginning at 10 am, will conduct an auction of live poultry and related items. Invariably, this is a large auction and broad ranges of birds are sold at reasonable prices.

To consign birds, please take them to the auction in a box to go with the birds when sold. The sale birds will be placed in show cages only immediately before they are sold and then returned to the box provided by the consignor. Consignments of birds and equipment are welcome from all.

Surprising and remarkable things have a way of happening at the Bloomsburg shows. At our Spring show in May of this year, for example, two very exciting events took place.

The first was the special appearance by Martha Stewart, guru of fine living, author, and nationally known television personality. Assisted by ABA Judge Johnny Batson, Martha Stewart selected the most beautiful bird in the show and awarded its owners a rosette. The bird chosen by Martha Stewart was a White Crested Blue Polish hen that was shown by Joel and Ellen Henning of Colden, New York.

On May 9th, the Friday following the show, Martha Stewart was a guest on The Tonight Show. In a conversation with Jay Leno, Martha Stewart remarked that she had "had the best time last Saturday [at] the Central Pennsylvania Avian Show."

This special appearance by Martha Stewart at the show was clearly the magical ingredient that transformed what is invariably an interesting and exciting annual event into an unforgettable experience for all concerned.

Footage that Martha Stewart's film crew shot at the CPAC's show and auction in May was broadcast on the Martha Stewart television program on Thursday, September 18th.

Martha Stewart's visit to the CPAC's spring show was truly "a good thing" for the CPAC and for the exhibition poultry hobby in general.

The second exciting event that took place at the CPAC's Spring show was the 1997 ABA Semi-annual meet. At that important meeting of the American Bantam Association, a successful qualifying meet for Mottled Old English Game Bantams, judged by ABA Vice-President Ralph Sheriff, Jr., took place.

We can't promise that the level of excitement at this year's Fall show on October 19th will be equal to that of our 1997 Spring Show, but we can guarantee that you will have a good time and that you will be glad you showed at Bloomsburg.

CPAC MEETING

September 14, 1997

The September, 1997 meeting of the CPAC took place in front of the poultry building on the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds. The ten members present were seated on three or four benches that were drawn together for the purpose of conducting the club's business. Present were: Terry Arbogast, Phil Malencore, Mark Whitebread, Leon Keeler, Gene Emery, Harold Strawser, Craig Russell, Mark Burns, Carl Harris, and S. Robert Powell.

The meeting, which was called to order at 1 P.M., was under the direction of the club's president, Mark Whitebread.

THE AUCTION: it will take place on October 18th (in what building?); the format that was used for the auction in the spring will be used again (the birds will be placed in show cages only before they are sold; after they are sold they will be returned to the box they came in and turned over to the buyer); the twelve show cages that are owned by the club will be used for the auction; Rev. Romig will be the auctioneer; CPAC members will perhaps handle the birds at the point of sale.

Leon Keeler reported that two additional names should be added to the memorial list of deceased club members: Marlin Eyster and Fred Fike.

THE SHOW: October 19th; Tom Kane and Troy LaRoche will judge the poultry show; it seems likely that we'll have 800-900 chickens and waterfowl and about 500 pigeons (judged by Muard Naugle and Terry Fick); the food stand (to be set up in what building?) will be run by Briget Kane's sister and her family; additional specials are needed for the show.

Mark Burns, Treasurer, reported that we have $463 in the checking account (Briget already has money for the show) and $126 in petty cash.

Carl Harris reminded the club that we were remiss in fulfilling our reciprocal specials arrangement with the Twin Tier Poultry Club before their show on September 7th. This oversight will be corrected.

It was agreed that all members of the club should always be mailed a copy of all show catalogues.

Leon Keeler donated to the club a box of pigeon trophies, to be recycled.

Mark Whitebread announced that he will not accept the nomination for the presidency of the club for the coming year.

Robert Powell announced that the CPAC's Spring Show and Auction will be featured on the Martha Stewart Living television broadcast on Thursday, September 18th. "This will be a big moment for the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club and for exhibition poultry," said he.

With no further business to conduct, the meeting was adjourned at 2:15 P.M.

1997 BLOOMSBURG FAIR

The CPAC has enjoyed a very positive working relationship with the Bloomsburg Fair over the years, due in a large measure to the support and friendship we have enjoyed with the poultry superintendent of the Bloomsburg Fair, Paul Slusser.

As usual, the poultry display was one of the main agricultural attractions at this year's fair. The exhibitors this year were as follows:

Waterfowl and Turkeys

Craig Russell, Harold Strawser, and the Rev. Roland Romig.

Poultry Show

Arlene Buss, Tom Buss, Feather Edge Farm, Carl-Betty-Seth Harris, Hilltop Game Farm, Robert and Jacob Mowrey, Beverly J. Oakes, Jeffrey M. Oakes, S. Robert Powell, Bob Simons, Joseph Trone, and Jarrod York.

The poultry show was judged by George Schroeder, Elton Minnich, and Dick Greubel.

The show champions were as follows:

Best Standard male:

Single Comb Light Brown Leghorn cock, shown by Feather Edge Farm

Best Standard female:

Single Comb White Leghorn hen, shown by S. Robert Powell

Best Bantam cock:

Mottled Japanese cock, shown by Thomas Buss

Best Bantam hen:

Black Cochin pullet, shown by Arlene Buss

CPAC's 1997 SPRING SHOW AND AUCTION ON NATIONAL TELEVISION

We, as a club, made our national television debut on Thursday, September 18, 1997, when our 1997 Spring Auction and Show were featured on Martha Stewart's daily television program.

The broadcast material includes both auction and show footage--and a lot more! It is truly wonderful! The broadcast, it can be argued, represents a very important event in the history of exhibition poultry in America. Never before has the hobby had such an enthusiastic endorsement on national television by such a high-profile poultry fancier as Martha Stewart.

The program has everything it should have. It's a very positive and enthusiastic presentation of the hobby. It whets the appetite of the spectator. It shows the interested spectator how to pursue the hobby, should he be interested in doing so. It presents the exhibition poultry hobby as a family experience. It shows the world out there that raising poultry for exhibition or pleasure is a legitimate, interesting, and rewarding thing to do. It reminds the viewer that raising poultry is one of the many possible ways to connect to the natural and organic soil from which we have all sprung.

We, as a club, have received compliments and congratulations from far and near on the Martha Stewart visit to our Spring Show and Auction. On 9/22, Bart Pals, a member of the CPAC and the Vice President of the American Poultry Association, sent the following note to Robert Powell:

"I just saw the Martha Stewart tape. I thought it was WONDERFUL. You truly did an outstanding job. I think that is one of the best poultry promotional shows I've ever seen.

We might be surprised at how much that does for poultry."

Yes, I'm, sure many good things will come as a consequence of Martha Stewart's visit to Bloomsburg this past spring.

NICE JOB!

Congratulations and special thanks to Briget Kane (poultry show) and David Stiles (pigeon show) for the beautiful show catalogues that they have produced for our 1997 Fall Show.

1997

APA YEARBOOK

The 1997 APA YEARBOOKS are out--and they are beautiful! Lorna Rhodes, the secretary/treasurer of the APA is the chairman of the APA Yearbook Committee. The other members of the committee are Bart Pals, Emmett Rachel, Dick Stevens, and Fred Zillich.

Congratulations on a job well done are due to the entire committee from poultry fanciers everywhere.

Among the many items of interest to CPAC members in the 1997 Yearbook are three articles by CPAC members:

"Partridge Plymouth Rocks" by S. Robert Powell (pp. 61-67)

"Cuckoo Dorkings" by Craig Russell (pp. 105-107)

"Raising Poultry in Iowa" by Bart Pals (pp. 156-158)

Three articles by CPAC members! That's pretty good, especially since there are only ten articles in the 1997 Yearbook.

Pages 176-177 will be of particular interest to CPAC members, as they contain a complete CPAC membership list (with complete address and phone number) for 1997. Those two pages are reproduced on the following two pages.

Maybe you should think about keeping this CPAC NEWSLETTER near your phone? When you need a fellow member's address or phone number, you'll have it.

EXHIBITORS' CHOICE

This sheet is a description of the EXHIBITORS' CHOICE special and a ballot for selecting the winner. The winner of this "special" will be selected by the exhibitors, each of whom will have one vote. Give your ballot to S. Robert Powell, who has sponsored this special. A ballot is given at the bottom of this page.

As an exhibitor, you are asked to select one bird that stands out, in your opinion, among all of the other birds in the show today. This bird is not necessarily the bird that you regard as the one that should be named Grand Champion of the Show, although that could be the bird that you choose. The purpose of this special is NOT to see if the exhibitors select the same bird that the judges select to be the Grand Champion of the Show. The judges are trained professionals who will evaluate all of the birds in the show in terms of well established and well recognized criteria (APA and ABA standards). As exhibitors, we will select, on the basis of many different criteria, one bird that stands out for us (the "fans' choice) among all of the birds in the show. The purpose of this special is to get all of the exhibitors involved in looking at and evaluating all of the birds in the show.

The bird that you select could be (1) the bird that you would select to be the Grand Champion of the Show if you were the judge of today's show; or (2) an unusually fine bird of a breed or variety rarely seen in the showroom or (3) a bird in near perfect show condition, but maybe not of perfect type; or (4) a bird of near-perfect type and color but maybe not in perfect show condition If the bird were in perfect show condition it would surely--in your opinion--be Grand Champion of the Show); or (5) a bird that is extremely valuable as a breeder, even though it might not be the greatest of show birds; (6) a bird that "shows" beautifully but which is not of grand champion type and color.

EXHIBITORS' CHOICE BALLOT

1. The exhibitor number of the owner of the bird is _____.
2. Which bird did you choose?
3. Why did you choose this bird?

Mr. Charles Oltersdorf

Dear Chuck:

As I see it now, I should be ready (I hope) to take the APA exam by the time of the Richmond show on November 22-23.

This last year has been difficult. My brother and I are now taking care of our mother at home. She is in good health but is confined to a wheelchair. It's a 24-hour job. And then a few weeks ago, I fell (as I was helping my mother into her wheelchair) and broke my left arm. What a circus. I hope to be all in one piece by the time of the Richmond show.

I don't know how my picture ended up on page 78 (among the licensed APA judges) of the 1997 APA YEARBOOK. Lorna Rhodes or the printer or someone got it mixed up.

I hope that this is ample notice to you that I would like to take the APA exam at Richmond.

Sincerely yours,

S. Robert Powell

It was a beautiful show.

Many people asked for you. I explained that you were in Paris, negotiating a contract for 30 percent of this year's Beaujolais harvest.

The Cobleskill Partridge Rock pullet was Champion American and Reserve Champion Standard. A Light Brahma hen shown by Art Lundgren was Champion Standard. Don Krahe judged the standards. There was also a beautiful Speckled Sussex hen (shown by Gary Overton) and a beautiful B. B. Red Modern Game cock (Champion AOSB, shown by SRP) on Champions' Row. Any of those birds could have been chosen as Champion Standard. Many people thought that my Partridge Rock pullet was the best bird there. No matter. The wonderful news is that this win on PARTRIDGE ROCKS puts me over the top on points, and I now qualify for the APA's GRAND MASTER EXHIBITOR AWARD with Partridge Rocks.

The 1997 APA YEARBOOK is finally out. The CPAC'S pages look great!

I broke one of the bones in my left arm on Sunday night when I was unloading at home following the Rochester show (details when I see you on Saturday). I think we'll have to use the phone to get out the troops for this Saturday's clean-up session.

Annual Fall Show
October 19, 1997

CPAC Officers and members wish to bid each of you a hearty welcome. For all those attending our fall show for the first time, and our stand-by regulars, we hope today will bring you a day of communion among Fancy friends, some good competition and generally an all around good time.

Bloomsburg in the fall is surrounded by mountains of colors. The shops in town have a wealth a fall goodies, including good food and spirits. Bloomsburg is a college town surrounded by quaint towns to the south, and west with Antique stores, boutiques and a mall to the north. If you don't fancy to be at the show all day, we recommend any of these to pass some time.

Our Judges today are Troy LaRoche and Tom Kane. They have their day set out for them. Judging will begin as close to 9:00 am as possible. Troy will begin with the Feather Leg Bantam Class. Tom will begin with the Standard AOS Class. If you wish to clerk, or are in the apprentice Judging program, please let the show secretary know. CPAC members and Officers will move birds up to Champion Row. Our auction will start at 1:00 PM, tickets will be on sale throughout the day. We will have a fifty-fifty drawing at 2:00 PM, don't forget your tickets. Sale Coops are available at $1.50 per coop. We ask you to limit each coop to 4 birds. Out side sales (tail gate) are by donation to the club. Our food stand will be open until 1:30 PM and we hope to have you on your way this afternoon shortly after 2:30 PM. Our Pigeon Show is also a good way to spend some time today.

Join us at Champion Row, later

EXHIBITORS' CHOICE

This sheet is a description of the EXHIBITORS' CHOICE special and a ballot for selecting the winner. The winner of this "special" will be selected by the exhibitors, each of whom will have one vote. Give your ballot to S. Robert Powell, who has sponsored this special. A ballot is given at the bottom of this page.

As an exhibitor, you are asked to select one bird that stands out, in your opinion, among all of the other birds in the show today. This bird is not necessarily the bird that you regard as the one that should be named Grand Champion of the Show, although that could be the bird that you choose. The purpose of this special is NOT to see if the exhibitors select the same bird that the judges select to be the Grand Champion of the Show. The judges are trained professionals who will evaluate all of the birds in the show in terms of well established and well recognized criteria (APA and ABA standards). As exhibitors, we will select, on the basis of many different criteria, one bird that stands out for us (the "fans' choice) among all of the birds in the show. The purpose of this special is to get all of the exhibitors involved in looking at and evaluating all of the birds in the show.

The bird that you select could be (1) the bird that you would select to be the Grand Champion of the Show if you were the judge of today's show; or (2) an unusually fine bird of a breed or variety rarely seen in the showroom or (3) a bird in near perfect show condition, but maybe not of perfect type; or (4) a bird of near-perfect type and color but maybe not in perfect show condition If the bird were in perfect show condition it would surely--in your opinion--be Grand Champion of the Show); or (5) a bird that is extremely valuable as a breeder, even though it might not be the greatest of show birds; (6) a bird that "shows" beautifully but which is not of grand champion type and color.

(detach along this line and give this ballot to S. Robert Powell)

Ms. Susan Howard
HCR Box 26
Selinsgrove, PA 17870

Dear Ms. Howard:

Dave Bailey phoned me yesterday about your check for the birds you sold at the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club's auction in October 1997.

The usual practice followed by the club is to make all payments for birds sold at the conclusion of the sale. Perhaps in the future this procedure will have to be posted on a sign in the auction hall—and announced by the auctioneer—so that confusion about payment does not arise? I'm sorry that this procedure was not clear.

At any rate, there will not be a problem with your payment. I will send a copy of this letter to the auction secretary and club treasurer. They will examine the records and forward to you a check for the birds that you sold.

We appreciate your consigning birds to our auction and hope that you will join us for all future club auctions.

Sincerely,

S. Robert Powell

Dear Robert,

Sorry I was unable to attend the Bloomingburg show.
The last time I was at Cobbleskill, I spent that evening looking for Andy and the lawn mower. It was 9 o'clock and he was 3 miles from home. It took me over a hour to follow him home with the truck.
So it's best someone be around and not leave him alone for any length of time.

Because it is so late in the year, we will give you a club membership thru 1998.

Best regards
John

Dear Chuck:

I will not be able to take the APA exam for Bantam and Standard Chickens at the Virginia Poultry Breeders' show at Richmond on November 22-23.

The orthopedic surgeons tell me that the cast will not be off my arm this month--and the cast would make it virtually impossible for me to take the showroom test. So I will have to re-schedule the exam for sometime after the first of the year.

I appreciate your patience and understanding in this matter.

Sincerely yours,

Partridge Plymouth Rocks

By S. Robert Powell

Sam A. Noftzger, of North Manchester, Indiana, is generally regarded as the originator of the strain of Partridge-Pencilled Plymouth Rocks that were recognized by the American Poultry Association as a standard variety in 1909 and officially admitted to The American Standard of Perfection on August 10, 1910, in Saint Louis. (Silver-Pencilled Rocks were admitted in 1907.) In 1909, Noftzger wrote a detailed article in which he described how he created and developed Partridge Rocks.

A copy of Noftzger's article and a vast quantity of information about Partridge Rocks were published in the Partridge Plymouth Rock Guide Book that was published by the American Partridge Plymouth Rock Club in 1931. A copy of that book, a copy of the American Partridge Plymouth Rock Club 1970 Breed Book published on the 60th anniversary of the breed), and a copy of Sam A. Noftzger's sales booklet (Origin and History of Partridge Plymouth Rocks by S.A. Noftzger, Originator and Breeder, Oaklyn Place, North Manchester, IN, 1911) were presented to this writer by Charles G. Hillenbrand, the prominent breeder of Partridge Plymouth Rocks, from Wyoming, Delaware, at the 1996 Virginia Poultry Breeders' Show at Richmond.

From those three books, we have learned a great deal about Partridge Rocks, and we are very grateful to Charles Hillenbrand for opening the door for us, so to speak, to the rich history of standard Partridge Rocks.

The history and development of Partridge Rocks are directly related to the so-called Cochin craze that developed during the second half of the nineteenth century in America. At that time, there were two distinct types of Cochins: (1) the full-feathered, or English, variety and (2) the scanty-feathered, or American, variety. For a time, the two types of Cochins competed in separate classes in shows in America, but the American Cochins, with their scanty leg feathering, were soon dropped as exhibition birds in favor of the more massive English type. Their scanty leg feathering notwithstanding, the American-type Cochins had outstanding partridge color and were highly regarded as utility birds that laid an exceptionally large number of eggs.

Given their virtues as utility birds, the American-type Cochins - we have learned from Craig Russell (Middleburg, PA) - were raised as utility birds as late as the 1940s and 1950s, even though by that time they had long since disappeared as exhibition birds.

For a time, Noftzger crossed the English and American types of Cochins and developed birds that had better partridge color than the pure English type and better leg feather than the pure American type. With such birds, he won on Partridge Cochins (which he continued to breed until 1907) in shows all over America.

Noftzger was not satisfied, however. He decided that he would create a new variety of fancy poultry with the following qualities: rapid growers, good egg layers, good table birds, single combs, together with the outstanding partridge color of the American Cochins. In 1898, Noftzger, having had the experience of helping others a few years before to create the Partridge Wyandotte, began the long process of creating Partridge-Pencilled Plymouth Rocks.

In the spring of 1898, Noftzger selected four American-type Partridge Cochin females with outstanding egg-laying qualities and exceptional partridge color. (One of those females, hatched on April 1, 1896, and named "Georgine" by Noftzger, laid 27 eggs in 28 consecutive days.) Georgine, her full sister, and two half-sisters were each mated with an Indian Game (Dark Cornish) cockerel with bright yellow legs, thin high comb, eyes toward the bay as much as possible, and Plymouth Rock shape as near as possible.

The next year, 1899, Noftzger mated eight of the females from that first cross with Golden Wyandotte cockerels, mostly single-comb sports, principally in Pairs and trios, but one or two of the most desirable males were given an extra female. The third year, 1900, nine single matings were made between the best females hatched in 1899 and the Golden Wyandotte males used in 1899.

The following year, 1901, ten pens were mated, using cocks and hens for the first time. In 1902, two pens were mated. In succeeding years, female Partridge Wyandotte sports, with single combs, were introduced into the blood line. The chicks from these Wyandotte sports, together with their mothers, were all disposed of, however, as most of them had dark legs and very few of them even passable type.

In 1906, eight matings were made, and in several of the pens as many as five females were used. In 1907, 60 females were divided into ten breeding pens, and Noftzger noted that in that year "the new breed made the greatest progress of its history." In 1908, 14 matings were made, and over 100 choice show birds, regarded unhesitatingly by judges as the best in existence, were produced. Noftzger's ten years of ceaseless work in developing Partridge Rocks had paid off and "a fowl of exceeding utility and exceptional beauty," to quote Noftzger, was brought into existence. Of such birds, R. LeRoy Armitage said: "They have the laying qualities of the Leghorn, the meat and vigor of the Game, and the beauty of the Partridge Cochin, truly a wonderful creation!"

It is interesting to note that a pen of six of Noftzger's Partridge Rocks won the New York egg-laying contest in 1910, the year in which they were admitted to The American Standard of Perfection. In the course of the year, the birds laid an average of 220 eggs each, for a total of 1,320 eggs from the six birds for the year.

From Noftzger's sales booklet, published in 1911 by Reub. Williams & Sons, Warsaw, IN, we learn that in 1911 Noftzger set up 25 single-mating breeding pens (one male and 8 females). In the sales booklet, the birds in each pen are identified by name and lineage, and their principal show wins are enumerated.

Think about Noftzger's breeding set up for a moment. Twenty-five pens of eight females and one male. That's 225 breeders—in one variety of one breed! From the perspective of the present day, such a set up is extraordinary, to be sure.

Eggs from each pen were sold in settings of 15 eggs. The price per setting ranged from $10 to $50. The eggs were shipped in Eyrie shipping crates. Noftzger also sold day-old chicks, from any of the 25 exhibition matings, at twice the price of eggs. Noftzger sold eggs and chicks to the public from every one of his matings. There were no special matings that he maintained for himself. Noftzger also sold foundation and breeding stock, at these prices: cocks, from $8 to $25 each; cockerels and hens, from $5 to $20 each, pullets, from $5 to $15 each; pens (one male and four females), from $25 to $75 per pen.

Noftzger's exhibition birds were strictly the product of single matings (one male per pen). From a single mating of his exhibition breeding stock, in addition Noftzger was proud to announce, first-class exhibition specimens of both sexes could be produced. Of the Partridge Rock, Noftzger said: "The Partridge Plymouth Rock is today ... the breed which was the most perfected, from the fancier's standpoint, at the time of admission to the Standard, reproducing more true to type than any breed ever did when it was in its first year as a Standard fowl."

Noftzger's premier breeding pen in 1911 was Pen 9, which was headed by "Oaklyn Delineator," a male Partridge Rock that was described by Noftzger as "the most wonderful specimen of this breed ever produced, with color richer than I ever saw in a Partridge male of any breed, and from the best breeding of Partridge Rocks that ever lived, "Pride of Oaklyn" and "Beatrice," his sire and dam." One of the eight females in that pen was "Oaklyn Belle," the first-place pullet at the September 1910 Indiana State Fair, the pullet for which Noftzger refused $100.

In addition to those pens for exhibition birds, Noftzger set up a utility/stock pen, in which he placed 30 late-hatch pullets from the very best blood lines, two cockerels, and one cock.

Other breeders created their own strains of Partridge Rocks, using their own means, more or less at the same time that Noftzger was doing so. Noftzger's strain, however, was generally regarded as the finest strain of Partridge Rocks.

Among those other creators of strains of Partridge Rocks were E.O. Thiem and Dr. W.C. Crocker of Foxboro, MA (began his efforts in 1899; relied heavily on single-comb sports from Partridge Wyandottes; also used Golden-Pencilled Hamburgs, Golden Laced Wyandottes, Brown Leghorns, and Partridge Cochins; Crocker is regarded by some as the originator of the primary eastern strain, Noftzger as the creator of the primary western strain).

Also, John Lowe of Swansea, MA; Rowland G. Buffinton of Fall River, MA; Messrs. Brackenbury and Cornell (used single-combed sports from Partridge Wyandottes, also Partridge Cochins and Brown Leghorns; this Cornell is Ezra Cornell, who founded Cornell University); Elmwood Farms, Weston, NJ; Hillcrest Farm (William F. Fotterall, proprietor), Oakland, PA; and Rock Hill Poultry Farm, Ossining, NY.

The fact that all those breeders—and surely others—were all working, more or less simultaneously, to create the standard Partridge Rock is all the more remarkable these days, when more than a few of the standard breeds of poultry that were created in the late-nineteenth and early-twentieth centuries are fighting for their lives, so to speak, for want of breeders to raise and show them.

In the years after 1910, Bird Bros. (Charles E. and Cyrus M.) of Meyersdale, Pennsylvania were very successful breeders and exhibitors of standard Partridge Plymouth Rocks. Other prominent early developers and breeders from the early years of this century were R.N. Perkins (Freeport, IL), Dr. W.C. Crocker (Foxboro, MA), W.F. Fotterall (Philadelphia, PA), R.G. Buffinton (Fall River, MA), Dr. W.J. Pirie (Springville, IA), R.A. Muth (Huntington, WV), and Porter P. Black (West Liberty, IA).

Highly regarded and well-known breeders in more recent years (listed in the 1970 Breed Book) are Rose F. Hurdle, Andrew M. Stodel, Beau-

Site Farm (Laurence C. Allen), Hoelker Bros., Roy J. Whitener, Van Bonneau, Henry K. Miller, E. Billings Miner, Tom Darden, Harold A. Hulbert, and Charles G. Hillenbrand.

Bantam Partridge Rocks were created following the development of the standard birds. Three breeders who were important in their development—we have learned from Craig Russell—were Cyril F. Menges, Dr. Paul Seibert, and Paul Ives. Bantam Rocks are currently raised and shown by many breeders.

The American Partridge Plymouth Rock Club (APPRC) was organized between January 1st and March 2nd, 1931. The officers for 1931 were President, Joseph L. Hoelker, Oldenburg, IN; Vice-President, Dr. W.J. Pirie, Springville, IA; Secretary-Treasurer, Laurence C. Allen, Sanford, ME; Election Commissioner, Everett T. Lord, Sanford, ME.

In the first eight months of its existence, the APPRC, with over 50 members, drew up and adopted a constitution and bylaws, and published its Guide Book, under the direction of the Guide Book Committee, made up of J. L. Hoelker, R.L. Armitage, and L.C. Allen. The American Partridge Plymouth Rock Club published monthly club notes; it designated Plymouth Rock Monthly of Chicago as its official monthly club magazine for 1931. Official APPRC ribbons were offered by the club for champion male, champion female, and champion pen at shows where five or more entries in each of those classes were shown in by three or more club members.

Partridge Rocks, characterized by the APPRC as "The Beauty-Utility Fowl," were shown in large numbers at many shows earlier in this century. At present day poultry shows there are sometimes less than 25 birds in the entire American class. In light of that fact, consider the number of Partridge Rocks alone that were exhibited at these shows in the past: Madison Square Garden, 1915, 81 birds; Keene, NH, 1926, 91 birds; Boston, 1927, 80 birds; Portland, 1927, 122 birds; Athol, MA, 1928, 143 birds; Iowa City, 1928, 119 birds; Providence, 1929, 113 birds; Portland, 1930, 62 birds; Atlanta, 1939, 153 birds; Oklahoma City, 1946, 106 birds.

There were 38 members in the club in 1970. Among them were Laurence C. Allen (Beau-Site Farm), Mrs. Alice E. Carpenter (who hatched and raised the Beau-Site Farm Chicks for 35 years), Charles G. Hillenbrand, Dick C. Horstman, Cyril F. Menges, Henry K. Miller (Blue Stream Farm), and Tommy Stanley. The president of the Partridge Plymouth Rock Club in 1970 was Van Bonneau of Dodson, TX.

From Norman Hillenbrand, we have learned that in 1972 the APPRC held its national meet in conjunction with the Richmond show. The active members of the club at the time—Tommy Stanley, Thomas Darden, Laurence Allen, and Norman Hillenbrand—went all out to make the meet memorable. They made up a prize list that included money for best head, best yellow legs, best striped male, best pencilled female, and so on. They phoned all the Partridge Rock breeders that they know of. As a result of their dedicated work, breeders of Partridge Rocks, from all across America, showed 125 standard Partridge Rocks in the 1972 national meet, which was judged by Ben Ricketts.

The APPRC ceased to exist after 1981. At the time, Thomas Darden, secretary of the Richmond show at the time, was the president of the APPRC; Tommy Stanley was the vice president and Norman Hillenbrand was the secretary/treasurer.

Several engravings by A.O. Schilling of Partridge Rocks are known to exist. Among them are: "Prince," third-prize cock, Chicago, 1908, bred and shown by S.A. Noftzger; "Georgine," first-prize hen, Great Chicago show, 1908, bred and shown by S.A. Noftzger; "First Prize Partridge Rock Cockerel, Madison Square Garden, January 1921, Bred and Owned by Bird Brothers, Meyersdale, PA"; "First Prize Partridge Rock Cockerel, Madison square Garden, New York, January 1926, Bred and Owned by Bird Brothers, Meyersdale, PA."

Also, "First Prize Partridge Plymouth Rock Hen, Chicago Coliseum Exposition, December 1930, Bred and Owned by Bird Brothers, Meyersdale, Penn."; "First Prize Hen and Grand Champion Partridge Rock, National Club Meet, and First Prize Partridge Rock Cock, Madison Square Garden, Dec. 1949—Jan. 1950, Bred and Owned by Beau-Site Farm, L. Allen, Prop., Sandford, Maine"; "Grand Champion Partridge Plymouth Rock Trio (1st old Trio) National Club Meet, Boston, Mass., Jan. 1953, Bred and Owned by Beau-Site Farm, L.C. Allen, Prop., Sandford, Maine."

The Partridge Plymouth Rock Guide Book that was published by the American Partridge Plymouth Rock Club in 1931 contains, as we mentioned earlier, a great deal of information on Partridge Rocks, including the following articles: "Partridge Rocks—Reflections on Nature" by F.N. Perkins; "History and Development of Partridge Plymouth Rocks" by Henry J. Hunt; "High and Low Tides in Partridge Rock History" by R. LeRoy Armitage; "Why We Are Breeding the Partridge Rocks" by Hoelker Brothers; "What Constitutes a Real Partridge Plymouth Rock?" by S.F. Raff.

Also, "A Woman's Success with Partridge Rocks" by Mrs. Fern Smith; "The Partridge Plymouth Rocks are Steadily Advancing" by D.M. Barcus; "View of the Partridge Plymouth Rock from All Angles" by R. LeRoy Armitage; "Improvement in Partridge Plymouth Rocks" by Mack T. Marshall; "Raising Partridge Rocks" by Dr. W.J. Pirie; "Whose Cherry is Red" by Shade; "Clear Hackled Females" by F.N. Perkins; "Partridge Plymouth Rock Color and Markings" by Laurence C. Allen; "The Beautiful and Artistic Partridge Plymouth Rocks" by Joseph L. Hoelker; "Partridge Rocks—Their Quality and How to Mate Them", by Edward A. Hamann; "Partridge Rock Mating Hints" by Laurence C. Allen; "Mating Partridge Plymouth Rocks" by S.A. Nofztger; "Trapnesting Partridge Plymouth Rocks" by Thomas G. Kinvig; and "Partridge Plymouth Rocks" by Rev. F.H. Eva Holcombe.

Among the breeders and exhibitors of standard Partridge Plymouth Rocks at the present are Behney and Miller (Myerstown, PA), Fred Brusco (West Patterson, NJ), Rob Dixon (Pocomoke, MD), Zelotes Eshmeyer (St. Mary's, OH), Charles G. Hillenbrand (Wyoming, DE), Bill and Joy Krueger (Mainitowoc, WI), S. TWIN TIER POULTRY CLUB

By Robert Whitney

On Sunday, September 7, 1997, we held our 15th annual show at the Steuben County Fairgrounds in Bath, New York. We had 98 exhibitors who entered 907 birds. Judging this year was done by the Canadian connection - Ralph Beamer, Gerald Donnelly and Paul Monteith. Our club gave out over $1,200.00 in cash and plaques at this year's show, sending many home happy. The top winner was Twin Cedar Farm who had the Super Champion of Show with a White Rock cockerel Large Fowl. This bird had won Champion Large Fowl and a White Wyandotte pullet also shown by Twin Cedar Farm was Reserve Champion Large Fowl. Bantam honors went to Art Lundgren, who had a Black East Indie hen as Champion, Reserve went to a Blue Old English Game hen exhibited by Ben Bensinger. Waterfowl Champion was the East Indie Hen. Reserve was a Gray Call Hen also shown by Art. We had 167 Featherlegs of which 101 were Cochins, Old English Games were our next popular with 125 showing. The Bantam Duck class as always had good numbers with 124 total showing.

Our Junior Show, which continues to grow, had many outstanding birds and kids.

Winners were Laura Adam - Durgin who had Champion Large Fowl on an Australorp pullet, Reserve Large Fowl was a Buff Laced Polish pullet shown by Russell Maynard. Champion and Reserve Champion Bantam went to Danielle Yobst with her Black Cochin cockerel and White Japanese hen. A Khaki Campbell young drake shown by Shawn Sorrells was Champion Waterfowl with Russell Maynard winning Reserve with a Gray Call young drake.

Alice Lee set up our showmanship contest again this year giving out T-shirts, ribbons and money. Jamie Matts did the testing of this year's group. Winners in the Senior Division: Seth Harris, Sarah Lee and Rusty Sandhu.

Junior Division was headed up by Shawn Sorrells, Trevor Sorrells and Kerri Clarkson. Charles Maynard won the Novice Division with Russell Maynard and Ashley Maloy placing a close second and third. Josh Hurd had the winning ticket drawn by Beth Adams, our APA-ABA youth director. He won a pair of Black Old English Game Bantams donated by Alice Lee. Thanks Alice and Jamie for your help. Also, I want to thank Amanda Clarkson, Laura Adams - Durgin and the Honorable Rick Hare for doing a great job clerking.

The TTPC hopes that our exhibitors, judges and guest enjoyed themselves and they will come back next year to what we hope will be the best show yet.

NEXT CPAC MEETING

The CPAC will meet on Saturday, November 29th, at 11 A.M. in the Poultry Building on the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds.

There are three primary items on the agenda:

(1) WRAP-UP ON THE FALL AUCTION AND SHOW

(2) CLEAN THE SHOW HALL:
If about 10 of us show up for the meeting, we can clean the building in less than two hours.

(3) RECEIVE CLUB NOMINATIONS FOR OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS FOR 1998. If you are unable to attend this meeting and if you are interested in nominating someone for an office, mail your write-in nomination to the CPAC Secretary, Mark Burns (882 Rock Street, Archbald, 18403). Your write-in nomination(s) must be received by November 30th.

At the regularly scheduled December meeting of the club, the Secretary will read the list of all nominations for all offices. At that time, members present may make additional nominations, after which, nominations will be closed. Following the December meeting, ballots will be sent to all members in good standing. All ballots are to be returned to the Secretary before the regularly scheduled January meeting, at which time the ballots will be opened and counted and the new officers and directors will assume office.

SEE YOU ON THE 29TH!

FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear Members and Friends,

Unfortunately, circumstances dictate that I am unable to continue as president of this outstanding organization. I wish to thank all of you for your support and encouragement over the past few years, and I hope you will offer the same to the next president.

I would also like to express my gratitude to all the members and friends of the CPAC who made our last auction and show such a resounding success. I won't mention any names as I'm sure to forget someone. All the hard work was and is greatly appreciated.

Thank you all, once again, and I'll see you at the shows.

FALL AUCTION

CPAC auctions are always enjoyable, and this year's Fall Auction
(October 18) was no exception.

A huge number of birds--as well as quite a lot of poultry equipment, wire, and cages--were sold. The quality of the birds sold was very good.

The auction took place in the State Building (two buildings down from the Poultry Building) on the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds. About ten of the show cages that are owned by the club were set up at the front of the auction area.
The birds were placed in the show cages only before they were sold. As soon as they were sold, they were returned to their boxes and turned over to their new owners. The system worked very smoothly and well. Special thanks to all CPAC members and friends (several volunteers from the house) who helped with the auction.

There was plenty of seating for the buyers and spectators.

The food stand was under the direction of Betty Harris, Doris Hughes, Phil Malencore, and Seth Harris. Special thanks to Karen Porr for the kettle of chili that she made and donated to the food stand.

Briget Kane and Mark Burns ran the books for the auction and everything went smoothly. The club made $961 on the auction.

When the auction was over, a group of about ten club members, assisted by several buyers and sellers, quickly cleaned the building. Special thanks to Theresa and Larry Fowler for their hard work.

Sincere thanks to all who helped.
As we all know, many hands do, indeed, make light work.

FROM JOHNNY BATSON

Had a very pleasant phone visit with Johnny Batson on October 17th. Johnny called to say again how much he enjoyed his guest judging experience with Martha Stewart at the CPAC's
1997 Spring Show.

We both agreed that the televised broadcast of Martha

Stewart's visit on Martha Stewart Living on September 18, 1997 was excellent and that the broadcast did much to promote the exhibition poultry hobby.

Club members and friends will be pleased to learn that Johnny Batson will be invited to judge at the CPAC's 1998 Spring Show on May 3rd. The show headquarters at that time will be the Econolodge in Bloomsburg, where 25 rooms have already been reserved by the CPAC.

Ashley was commended by many exhibitors on her outstanding Black Cornish hen (great type, correct leg color, nice tail).

The "special" was put up by S. Robert Powell.

THANKS JERRY SCOTT

Jerry always does a lot to help make the CPAC's auctions and shows a success—and this year's Fall Auction and Show were no exception.

Thank you, Jerry, for all that you do. Special thanks for the art work and calligraphy on the "specials" envelopes for the Fall Show.

UCCLE BELGIANS

We were sorry to learn that Sal Ruffino's special six-year old Mille Fleurs Uccle Belgian hen died in September of this year.

We were pleased to learn, however, that Sal Ruffino obtained two Mille Fleurs Uccle Belgian hens ("Caterina" and "Giuseppina") from Audrey and Gary Overton on October 22nd.

Sal reports that he had a very pleasant visit with Audrey and Gary during his visit to their farm on his way back east from the annual congress of the Alliance Francaise USA in Denver. Sal never made it to Denver. A major winter storm forced him to cancel his autotrip to Colorado when he reached western Kansas.

Sal and his two new Uccle Belgians arrived safely back in Blue Bell, PA, on October 23rd.

MEMBERSHIP LIST

The CPAC membership list that was published on pages 5-6 of the October 13, 1997 issue of the CPAC NEWSLETTER were re-produced from pages 176-177 of the 1997 APA YEARBOOK. Publishing deadlines being what they are, it was necessary to send the membership list to the APA about ten months before the yearbook was published.

For that reason, people who became members of the CPAC in the period after the membership list was sent to the APA (from about February 1997 on) are not listed on the CPAC membership pages that are printed in the 1997 APA YEARBOOK.

We mention this here because several members in good standing of the CPAC phoned, following the publication of the 1997 APA YEARBOOK, and said, in effect: "Hey, what about me? You forgot me in the list."

Hopefully, we didn't forget anyone who was a member at the time the membership list was compiled (in February 1997). If we did, please let us know.

QUACK QUACK

A duck's quack does not echo--and no one knows why.

The call of geese, especially as they migrate, is also extraordinary. I (SRP) have long been of the opinion that migrating Canadian geese can sometimes be heard "from miles away." Does anyone know of any statistics that have been established on the distance from which Canadian Geese can be heard?

NOVEMBER FRIDAY

28 FIELD TRIP:
CENTRAL PENNSYLVANIA
AVIAN CLUB

Twice a year, the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club sponsors a two-day exhibition of poultry, pigeons, and game birds. The event, which includes a lively auction, is designed to promote both ornamental fowl and utility birds (which are bred for meat and eggs).

Martha Stewart, an avid collector of rare poultry breeds, visits the event to pick the "Most Beautiful Bird" of the show from more than 2000 entries. John Batsom, one of the event's lead judges, shows Martha how to evaluate competition fowl.

Keeping chickens can be a educational and productive project for the whole family. Tending a coop teaches children the basics of animal husbandry while it lets them enjoy the sometimes silly behavior of a brood of hens. Martha Stewart and poultry expert Clell Agler discuss the delights of raising beautiful ornamental chickens like the Silky, and champion egg-layers like New Hampshire Bantams and Orpingtons. She is especially fond of Araucanas and Americaunas for their marvelous blue- and green-shaded eggs. Chickens provide ample help to the home gardener by eating unwanted insects and weeds while fertilizing the soil.

Established in 1974, the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club promotes all species of exhibition poultry, pigeons, game and cage birds. The next show takes place October 18-19, 1997 in Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania.

Dear Poultry Friend:

As a member of the American Poultry Association, you are surely aware that two highly qualified candidates are now running for the office of president of the APA, Bart Pals and Pat Malone. Whomever wins the election, I'm sure that the APA will be well served.

I am writing you this letter to tell you that I believe BART PALS, who is currently completing a very successful term of office as Vice President of the APA, to be the better man for the job at this point in the APA's history. He has the organizational and diplomatic skills, the know-how, and the patience to do the job--and to do it well. Equally important, he has made a firm and enthusiastic commitment to help build a future for the APA.

I am going to vote for BART PALS as President of the APA, and I urge you to vote for him. Enclosed is a copy of a two-page statement that Bart Pals sent to me about himself and his candidacy for the presidency of the APA.

Best wishes for a joyful holiday season. During this holiday season, in addition to the usual poultry chores, it looks like I will be taking care of quite a number of new chicks. In late October, when I could see that a couple of "extra special" two- and three-year old hens were getting ready to lay, I decided to set up a few breeding pens (Partridge Rocks, Black Orpingtons, R. C. Rhode Island Reds, Modern Games). Fertility was excellent—better than ever. I now have four hens with about 40 chicks—and the incubator is full. Now the pullets are laying well. It's a wonderful time of year.

A.P.A. AND A.B.A
GENERAL LICENSED JUDGE
BART PALS
1119 EAST STATE STREET
MASON CITY, IOWA 50401
(515) 424-3709

CANDIDATE FOR AMERICAN POULTRY ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT

The American Poultry Association has a long and wonderful heritage, which I truly respect. But, we need to start preparing the A.P.A. for the future. We have revised and rewritten many things over the last couple of years. It is now time to revisit the membership and give the A.P.A. back to it's members.

Over the last several years we have received many great ideas, only some of which have been acted upon. The A.P.A. Home Page is one example of a member's idea being implemented. Since it's inception the A.P.A. home Page has had nearly twenty thousand visits. Through the Home Page we have been able to reach a whole new audience. This needs to be expanded to include A.P.A. forms and membership application. Since inviting questions, suggestions, and ideas we have received a host of outstanding proposals by the members which we need to aggressively pursue.

The A.P.A. needs to nurture it's relationship with the industry. We have started by referring all industry related e-mail to universities and industry members. In return they are referring all purebred poultry e-mails and questions to us. By doing this we work on building a relationship with the industry and universities, and are getting questions answered. Working with the poultry industry opens doors for purebred poultry that we have never before thought possible. Murray McMurray hatchery sells more A.P.A. memberships then anyone else, but until only two years ago the A.P.A. and the Nation's oldest purebred hatchery had not worked together in such a cooperative manor. The American Poultry Association has many wonderful resources available that have, as yet, been untapped.

The A.P.A. needs to be more accessible to the members. A.P.A. "connections" should be in place in which qualified people located in different parts of the country would set up tables at shows and would be available to the members. Directors and State/Provincial reps are available but seldom do they setup tables. These connections would be an outreach of the A.P.A. secretary's arm. We should have at least two in Canada, one on the west coast and at least one in the south.

We need to continue to work on opening the lines of communication. We need correspondence within the A.P.A.. Including the officers, directors, State reps and, most importantly, the MEMBERS. We need to get members more actively involved in the committees and realize the importance of there input. We need to make the A.P.A. financially beneficial to it's membership. By offering a discount on publications, feed, medications, etc. it should become cost effective to be an A.P.A. member.

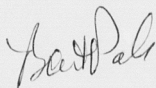

Anyone who knows me will testify to my sincerity and dedication to purebred poultry and the A.P.A.. I have worked very hard to help educate, and make educational material available to the youth and new exhibitors. I have not written hundreds of articles because I think I am a great writer nor did my wife and I develop the "From Chick to Champ" video because we think we are Stephen Spielberg. Rather, I know there is a need to offer these materials as a source of learning for the youth and new fancier.

I volunteered to do the Home Page, having absolutely no expertise in this area simply because we knew there was a need. Through the help of several individuals my knowledge has broadened and we have another resource available.

Since being elected vice president I have notice items the board has approved but have been virtually left on the table. One example is having a "questionnaire" in the A.P.A. Quarterly. This questionnaire has been used once in four years. We need to use this tool, as a way for acquiring information and ideas from the members.

I am asking you to please consider supporting me, in my bid for president, as I try to bring the American Poultry Association up to the stature it deserves. Some people say that purebred poultry is simply a backyard hobby and no one will take us serious. I say this: The USDA and poultry industries throughout the United States predict that by the year 2000 Iowa will be the number one state in poultry. In Iowa the governing agent for the poultry industry is the Iowa Poultry Association. This association has recognized the importance of purebred poultry by allotting us equal representation on the Iowa Poultry Association board. I believe that ALL of the poultry industries throughout the Nation can be shown the importance of purebred poultry through diligence and commitment.

Again, I would appreciate your support.

Dear Poultry Friend:

Given (1) your long-term association with the APA and (2) the fact that you are a licensed APA judge, it goes without saying that you are surely aware that two highly qualified candidates are now running for the office of president of the APA, Pat Malone and Bart Pals. Whomever wins the election, I'm sure that the APA will be well served.

In all likelihood, you know personally one or both of these candidates. In all probability, you have already made your decision as to whom you will vote for in the upcoming APA elections. In the event that you have not yet made that decision, however, allow me to share with you the two-page statement that Bart Pals sent to me about himself and his candidacy for the presidency of the APA.

As you know, BART PALS is currently completing a very successful term of office as Vice President of the APA. Dear Karen & Rick,

Look at it this way —
You can make paper airplanes out of the "vote-for-Bart-

you earlier today —

Before the December issue and I read your Pat

I like the idea that you are taking a public stand in favor of one of the candidates (as I am).
Many people are afraid

RECYCLED

FREEZE, RIGHT WHERE YOU ARE

By S. Robert Powell

Most of us know all too well what it's like to get up in the middle of the night and head out to a poultry show.

Too much rushing about in the early morning hours as you try to get everything done that has to be done. Too much anxiety as you drive long hours in the dark, only to discover - to your chagrin - that you're still 75 miles from the show hall and that judging will begin in one hour. Not enough time to adequately clean up your birds once they're in the show cages.

To avoid those - and other difficult consequences of middle - of - the - night departures for poultry shows, three of my poultry buddies (Bob Anke, Chuck Campfield, Dick Laabs) and I decided to travel together to the 15th annual fall show of the Twin Tier Poultry Club at Bath, New York, on September 7th. We decided to leave for the Sunday show at 1 pm on Saturday and to travel in Bob Anke's house trailer (with sleeping accommodations for six), with Chuck Campfield at the wheel.

Like clockwork, everything went beautifully on Saturday: we arrived in Bath, New York in plenty of time to get our birds into their show cages and to groom them before the show hall closed.

We then had dinner at a nice restaurant and returned to the fairgrounds. After some very enjoyable poultry talk, we called it a day and turned in.

I usually get up very early, so I was not surprised to discover that it was 4 am when I woke up on Sunday. I decided to get up even though I knew it was much too early to expect the show hall to be open.

I walked around the fairgrounds. It was a beautiful morning - still very dark, but the moon was out, and the star-filled sky was a sight to behold.

Recently, I read an article about the importance of the constellation Orion to the ancient Egyptians, and so I was anxious to study that constellation. I did so.

At about 5 am, I decided - just for the heck of it - to do a round trip on the access road from the highway into the fairgrounds. As I passed the fourth house on the right on the way out, a side-porch light came on and a man let out a dog for its morning outing. I said "Good morning." The man made no reply. "Be unsociable if you want to - see if I care," said I to myself. I continued on my way.

When I returned to the fairgrounds, I sat down on one of the tables in the shade pavilion. Later in the day, all the tables in the pavilion would be covered with Chinese auction items. The pavilion would also be full of birds for sale.

Suddenly, from out of nowhere, a police car, its roof lights on and wildly spinning, raced down the access road and onto the fairgrounds. I was very visible at the edge of the pavilion.

The police car came at me at full speed and stopped, in true Hollywood/TV police-drama style, a few feet from where I sat. Both front doors on the still-running police cruiser swung open. Two police officers sprang from the car and pointed flashlights directly in my face. I remained motionless. I said nothing.

Slowly, very slowly, they approached. "Let's see your identification!" barked one of the officers. I took out my driver's license and showed it to him.

I sensed that these keepers of the peace might be wondering why I was sitting on a picnic table in the shade pavilion on the Steuben County Fairgrounds at 5 o'clock in the morning. I explained, before being asked, that I was a poultry exhibitor at the annual fall show of the Twin Tier Poultry Club and said that I was waiting for the show hall "over there, in the sheep - and - swine building" to open.

I showed them the copy of the exhibitors' list that I had in my back pocket and pointed out my name, exhibitor 82, in the list.

The tension in the air diminished, somewhat, and the two officers no longer seemed to regard me as a dangerous criminal - only a poultry fancier, and apparently not too dangerous a one, although probably at least half crazy.

The second officer, sensing that I must be wondering what was going on, offered the following - "We had a call that some drunk was wandering about in the dark on the access road and on the fairgrounds."

Instantly, I knew who called the police: the unsociable man who was putting his dog out for a walk as I passed by his house - the man who said nothing when I spoke to him. "Who else would be out at this time of night, walking down the street," he must have thought, "but some drunk who can't find his way home?"

The two police officers, who seemed a little disappointed that they - defenders of truth, justice, and the American way - had not apprehended a dangerous threat to the social order, took their leave. When they were well away from the fairgrounds, I gave out a sigh of relief and noted that day was breaking. It looked like it would be a beautiful day.

It wasn't long before the Whitney brothers arrived and opened the show hall. We had a good laugh about the incident.

The moral of the story, I guess, is this. If you're going to arrive early - very early - at a poultry show, stay in your vehicle and maintain a very low profile, or you may get yourself into trouble with the law.

ROCHESTER'S BEST SHOW By Dan Schuth

I'm not kidding when I say this was the best show I've ever been at. The weather was great on October 4 for the Youth Show and also on the 5th for the open show. For the Open Show on Sunday, we hosted 127 exhibitors with 1,027 birds. It is also estimated that 3,000 visitors to the Genesee Country Museum passed through the show.

The Youth Show, on Saturday, hosted 46 exhibitors, showing 237 birds. Rick Hare did a great job judging all the classes and keeping on a good schedule. Champion Large Fowl went to Laura Adams-Durgin with a Black Australorp, while Trevor Sorrells took Reserve with a Brown Leghorn. Robert Maynard's White Leghorn won Champion Bantam with Emily Zappella's White Call taking Reserve. Emily's White Call was also Champion Waterfowl, while Sarah Weinheimer took Reserve with a Gray Call. The best production bird was Joe Clark's Rhode Island Red with an Australorp by Robert Maynard taking Reserve. JoAnne Lesswing and her team did a great job pulling this show together for all the youth. Other events on the youth agenda included a crowing contest, sack races, and egg toss, relay and a sleepover at the museum.

The show was set up beautifully for both days. All coop stands and bases were covered with paper skirting, while huge pots of yellow mums were placed at the ends of each row and at the doors. Duff Wehler's displays attracted a lot of interest. The effort of work and quality was evident by the crowds studying them.

As a note to other clubs: check out the photographs showing our new club banners. These really add a nice touch to the show. Add something like this to your show and I guarantee you'll get compliments.

Our judges for the Open show on Sunday were Don Krahe, Bob Steiner, and Wilbur Stauffer. Don Rogers judged the wild waterfowl and pheasants. Excellent job gentlemen. Champion Large Fowl went to Art Lundgren with a Light Brahma Pullet, while Bob Powell took Reserve with a Partridge Rock Pullet. Gary Overton had Champion APA and ABA Bantam with a Speckled Sussex Pullet while Art Lundgren took ABA Reserve on a White Call Hen and APA Reserve on a White Wyandotte Cockerel. Art's White Call also was Champion Waterfowl with Reserve Going to Darrel Sheraw on a Rouen Hen. Grand Champion Pheasant went to Joe Clark with a Lady Amherst Cock. Walter Thoms had Grand Champion Wild Duck with a Mandarin Cock and Dan Porter took Grand Champion Wild Goose on a Blue Cock.

A major factor contributing to a great show is the exhibitors and we had the greatest, from six states and Canada. Among the exhibitors traveling the furthest were Gary and Audrey Overton from Ohio (almost Indiana), Dave Bethel from Rhode Island, Kay St Amour from Maryland, and Bob Wightman from North Carolina.

We appreciate the time and effort put in by all those who attended our 90th Anniversary show and hope that the commemorative mugs awarded to best of breeds will remind you to come back next year to "show a few at Rochester".

35TH SHOW AT COBLESKILL A SUCCESS

By Beth Adams, Secty

The exhibitors rolling in on Saturday afternoon were greeted with a much-improved situation at Cobleskill this year. Not only was the whole hall set up and waiting for them, but the entire club membership was calm and ready to go! Many thanks to the club members who helped organize and prepare for the show.

The second improvement over previous years was the addition of several antique silver cups to the prizes available at our show. Jeff Hurlato, a member from Hackensack, New Jersey donated three cups dating back to the 1920s to the club for perpetual trophies. The winners of overall Show Champion, Junior Champion and Champion Waterfowl will have their names added to the trophies each year. These beautiful cups add a taste of the history of exhibition poultry, as well as an added dimension of grace to our show. Thanks Jeff!

We had great judges with us this year: Jerry Yeaw, Tom Kane and Gerald Donnelly. They had to work hard since entries were higher than expected, with a total of 1206 including 196 Junior entries. Don Nelson worked with the Juniors on their birds, and met many kids who have worked hard all year on their poultry projects. The Junior show was won by Sean Kane with a call duck.

The overall show champion was an incredible Partridge Rock pullet by S. Robert Powell. This same bird was, obviously Champion Large Fowl, with a Black Cochinchin pullet by Bill Ryan taking the Reserve Large Fowl spot. Champion Bantam was a Buff Cochinchin pullet by Bob Hawes, with the Reserve Bantam spot being split between a Spangled Old English Hen by Dave Lofgren for the APA, and a White Call drake by Ey Avery for the ABA. Champion Waterfowl was the same White call by Ey Avery, and Reserve

Waterfowl was an Embden gander by Adams Waterfowl.

We had a very nice waterfowl exhibit this year with over 30 geese shown. Champion Waterfowl was the White Call old drake by Ey Avery, which was also Champion Duck. Reserve duck was a Rouen old drake by Shawn Streeter. The heavy duck class was won by Shaw's Rouen, with the reserve going to a Pekin old duck by Charlotte Eldred. The medium duck class was won by a Buff old duck by John Hayes, with reserve being a Cayuga old drake by Cliff Douglass. The light ducks was won by a White Runner old drake by Bonni Cavanaugh, who also took the reserve spot with a Black Runner old drake.

Bantam Ducks was won by Ey Avery, who also took the reserve spot on a White Call young duck.

The goose classes were won by the old gander Embden of Adams Waterfowl. The reserve in the heavy class was a Toulouse old goose by Adams Waterfowl. Adams also took the reserve medium spot with a Buff old goose, and the reserve light spot with a tufted Roman old gander. Best medium goose was won by Jeff Lurato on a Sebastopol old goose, and the light class was won by Bonni Cavanaugh on a Brown China old gander. The Bantam chicken classes were championed by Bob Hawes' Buff Cochinchin pullet with the reserve spot going to Dave Lofgren's Spangled Old

CENTRAL PENNSYLVANIA AVIAN CLUB NEWSLETTER

December 9, 1997

S. Robert Powell, Editor (R. D 1, Box 40, Carbondale, PA 18407-9706. 717-282-5197)

NEXT CPAC MEETING

The CPAC will meet on Sunday, December 14, at 1 P. M. at Mark Whitebread's in Shickshinny. If you need directions to Mark's place, phone him at 717-256-3127.

At this meeting of the club, the Secretary will read the list of all nominations for all offices for 1998. Members present may make additional nominations, after which, nominations will be closed. Following the December meeting, ballots will be sent to all members in good standing. All ballots are to be returned to the Secretary before the regularly scheduled January meeting, at which time the ballots will be opened and counted and the new officers and directors will assume office.

CPAC OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS FOR 1997

President: Mark D. Whitebread
First Vice-President: Craig T. Russell
Second Vice-President: Carl Harris
Secretary/Treasurer: Mark F. Burns
Directors: Leon Keeler, Mike Lukan
NEWSLETTER: S. Robert Powell,
Editor

"When the grouse drum at night, there will be a deep fall of snow."

POSTAL BRUTALIZATION

If you did not receive a November 19, 1997 issue of this NEWSLETTER, your copy was one of three that were lacerated/mangled the United States Postal Service in mid-November. Only last week did the three brutalized NEWSLETTERS make their way back to the Editor. Unfortunately, the labels were missing on all three, so I don't know who didn't receive the issue.

So, if you didn't receive a November 19, 1997 issue of the CPAC NEWSLETTER, let me know, and I'll send you a replacement copy at once.

November 29, 1997 Meeting

Eight of us showed up for the meeting/clean up on November 29th at the Poultry Building on the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds: Mark Burns, Mark Whitebread, Carl Harris, Gene Emery, Craig Russell, Harold Strawser, Leon Keeler, and S. Robert Powell.

The Poultry Building is now beautifully clean—all set for the CPAC's Spring Show 1998. Special thanks to the eight stalwart and dedicated club members who did the job.

We had a good time—lots of poultry talk as we cleaned the building. When the cleaning was over, we gathered around the box of SRP's pickup truck and talked about the coming year and the upcoming CPAC elections. Nominations from the floor for the officers and directors of the club for the coming year were received.

The complete list of nominations, in ballot form, will be mailed to all members in good standing following the December 14, 1997 meeting.

Robert Powell showed the group a photograph of a Mille Fleurs Uccle Belgian hen (reproduced herein on page 3) that Dick and Thola Waldau sent to the Editor. At the Columbus, OH show on November 8-9, 1997, this hen was Best Uccle Belgian (43 birds in class) and RESERVE CHAMPION FEATHER LEGGED BANTAM! Way to go Dick and Thola! Congratulations!

Robert also reported that the Martha Stewart/CPAC visit program that was nationally broadcast on September 18, 1997 on Martha Stewart's television program was re-broadcast on November 28th—the day after Thanksgiving. Very enthusiastic and positive comments have been received by many club members, from far and near, about the Martha Stewart/CPAC broadcast and re-broadcast.

Robert: "The timing of this re-broadcast was wonderful. It was the perfect program for the day after Thanksgiving, when everyone wants to forget about food and about how much they overate on the preceding day. In addition, virtually everyone in America who didn't go shopping on that day was probably at home in front of the television. The viewing audience must have been immense.

Most significantly, however, the program about Martha Stewart's visit to the CPAC 1997 Spring Show was perfect for that broadcast date because, on the figurative level, the show is about bedrock American values and authenticity—which is what Thanksgiving is all about. The values implicitly celebrated in the broadcast program, in other words, are the identical values that brought most viewers together to watch the broadcast. What a combination!"

The group agreed that the CPAC should again meet on December 14, 1997, at 1 P.M. Mark Whitebread said that he would host the meeting at his house in Shickshinny.

Lancaster Turkey Flock Has Avian Influenza

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Lancaster Co.) — State Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes Jr. on Wednesday afternoon announced that the H7N2 avian influenza virus has been positively detected in a 24,800-bird northern Lancaster County turkey flock.

At a general press conference held in the state Department of Agriculture Building in Harrisburg, Secretary Hayes told media news reporters that on Tuesday evening, lab results confirmed that the flock — consisting of 13,000, 10-week-old birds, and 11,800, 10-day-old birds — tested positive for the non-pathogenic H7N2 strain of avian influenza.

It is a non-threatening disease for humans.

The turkeys are slated for disposal, and a farm-specific quarantine has been imposed.

As of presstime, a team from the PDA Bureau of Diagnostic and Laboratory Services was to be finishing a reconnaissance of the area to discover all poultry operations within a three-mile range.

According to Secretary Hayes, the farm lies just about a mile north of the edge of an area in Lancaster County that had been under general quarantine since July because of several flocks of layer chickens that had been found to have the same, non-pathogenic (deadly) H7N2 strain of avian influenza. An area in northern Lebanon County had two flocks — one commercial, one a bird dealer's — test positive and be destroyed.

The general quarantine in Lancaster had been lifted Nov. 10.

"We are very concerned about the presence of the H7N2 virus in (yet) another flock," Hayes said. "This is the first evidence of the virus in turkeys, and the first new infection since mid-July."

"Clearly, we must remain vigilant in our biosecurity efforts as we work to contain any future spread of the virus."

There is no danger in the consumption of the meat and eggs of birds infected with the avian influenza H7N2, and, according to Secretary Hayes, this particular strain does not have a form that poses any threat to human health.

The threat is to the poultry industry, and, potentially, other wildlife.

The H7N2 strain can turn into a pathogenic form.

In other words, the current form of H7N2 avian influenza causes illness and some mortality in birds, but will not kill them all. A pathogenic form would kill them all.

Since the outbreak late last year into this year, the state requested from USDA, and got, 4 million doses of vaccine, good for two years.

Secretary Hayes said that, as was done with the chicken flocks, the USDA protocol will be followed in administering the vaccine.

That protocol requires that the vaccine only be administered if the virus becomes pathogenic.

For poultry growers, the state Legislature approved the spending of $5 million to compensate for birds destroyed because of the virus. To date, $841,000 has been spent to compensate poultry owners for the value of the birds and eggs destroyed, the costs for destroying them, and for cleaning and disinfection work.

The turkey farmer is also to be compensated for losses.

During the press conference, Secretary Hayes also said that, while scientists are not certain of how the virus is being spread, some patterns apparently are being discovered.

The layers affected earlier this year were, of course, all females. The turkey flock discovered to have the avian influenza was comprised of all females.

While it may well be just coincidence, or a superficial association, Hayes said it could also suggest that the pathway the virus takes in infecting birds is through the vent of the female bird. The vent is the opening of the female reproductive tract — where the eggs come out. For some time there was some question as to why the layer flocks were found with the avian influenza, while broiler flocks were not.

Some early conjecture was that since layers generally live longer than broilers, that the broilers were being harvested before the disease manifest itself.

However, with the young turkeys, that doesn't seem to be the case.

It was announced earlier that pigs have not been found to be carriers or susceptible, though the disease is believed to be prevalent in wild bird populations.

Secretary Hayes said the virus can travel easily — on the droppings of poultry, for example — and possibly be transmitted that way.

Dr. Bruce Schmucker, chief of the Regulation and Compliance Division of the PDA Bureau of Animal Health and Diagnostic Services, said that scientific assumptions being used thus far are that the virus is somewhat fragile and some biologists believe it could not survive more than 250 feet from an infected poultry house. A three-mile range is being considered as a limit for natural spread (other than other birds, insects or animals).

He said that it seems more likely that the clothes or exterior of a human would be a carrier.

The PDA Bureau of Animal Health and Diagnostic Services is one part of the state's tripartite PADLS — Pennsylvania Animal Diagnostic Laboratory System — which includes diagnostic services at Penn State University and the University of Pennsylvania New Bolton Center Diagnostic Laboratories.

Each of the partners in PADLS has complementary strengths and equipment, and are connected via computer.

The system, along with the completion of the state's new diagnostic laboratory in Harrisburg, has received its accreditation, enabling more efficient diagnostic work to support agricultural enterprise, as well as providing a protective defense to guard animal and human health.

Dr. Robert Eckrode, with the University of Pa. New Bolton Center, has been working on the avian influenza problem.

Eckrode is president of the American Association of Avian Pathologists, that held an international symposium in Athens, Ga., about avian influenza (it's world-wide). The proceedings are expected to be available soon.

He said that some of the observations made about the disease that has affected Lancaster and Lebanon counties this year may end up being nothing more than coincidence.

He also said that knowledge of the disease is still limited.

He did say that he doesn't believe that this outbreak in the turkey flock is related to the earlier outbreaks in the layer flocks.

However, he said that there are many different aspects of the dynamics between humans, birds, the disease and the environment that have to be considered, but that time and effort haven't been made available yet to look at the entire big picture of possibilities and likelihoods.

He said that while tests done during the early 1980s on the pathogenic virus that decimated the poultry industry in the area were done without consideration of wind or vectors.

He said that the tests were done by sampling the grounds surrounding the infected poultry building to determine how far away from the building that tests continue to show some evidence of the virus.

That didn't take into account the potential for the disease to be carried on a feather on the wind, or some other mechanism for dispersal.

The fact is that there are at least several other characteristics of the region that may or may not have something to do with the spread of the disease.

(The disease showed up in both Lebanon and Lancaster counties along the northern edges of both valleys, in the foothills of mountains. They are areas that, because of prevailing wind patterns, would be likely areas for airborne debris to settle out to the ground. Further, both areas are in proximity to major trucking routes — Rt. 78 in Lebanon County, and the Pa. Turnpike in Lancaster County — where the open-crated, open sided poultry trailers traveling through could potentially bring contaminated birds.)

As far as determining the species or origin of the H7N2 virus, Eckrode said he believes this strain may be surviving in the live bird market, where it has been found several times since the 1980's outbreak of the other deadly virus.

During the press conference, Hayes said that it was called as part of his policy of ensuring that the public is well aware of happenings in agriculture, both good and bad.

He said that as further developments occur, the media will be advised.

"What we're doing now," he said, "is in keeping with proper protocol of keeping the public informed as to critical events in the agricultural realm."

"Along with the good news, from time to time ... there is some that is less than that."
